SPECIAL SESSION OF INDEPENDENCE FOR INDIA

LEGISLATURE TO AID UNEMPLOYMENT SEEN

Relief For Drought
Stricken Areas May Be Considered

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 12.—A special session of the Ohio legislature may be called next month for the purpose of dealing with the unemployment situation throughout the state, it was indicated here today by Governor Myers Y. Cooper.

It was expected that if the special session is held, the governor may ask the solons to provide a way for enabling drought-stricken communities, particularly those threatened with water famine, to obtain relief from this situation.

Officials of the Ohio Library Association have asked the governor, in the event of a special session, to request legislators to provide funds which will enable the state library, municipal libraries and various school libraries in various parts of the state to continue operation without interruption.

Governor Cooper conferred today with Assistant Attorney General Earl C. Shively relative to certain aspects of the proposed session.

The governor declared that he is giving the matter serious consideration and expects to make a definite announcement within the next few days.

Should a special session be called, it will probably convene about the middle of December when the legislators come to Columbus to hold their customary caucuses preliminary to the opening of a regular legislative session in January.

The governor stated that the special session, if called, would not last more than a day or two.

Scores of officials of municipalities and other taxing districts have urged the governor to call the special session to deal with the unemployment situation.

In many instances, the local authorities are without sufficient funds to proceed with desired public improvement projects which would give employment to thousands of unemployed workers.

It has been suggested that the legislature pass some sort of an enabling act that would authorize these communities to issue bonds or short time notes in order to borrow money with which to finance these projects.

HITCH-HIKERS ROB INFANTRY OFFICER

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 12.—Three hitch-hikers forced Brig. Gen. Robert M. Brookfield, 57, commander of the 56th infantry brigade, Pennsylvania National Guard, to drive to a lonely spot early today and rob him of $45 and speed away in his machine.

General Brookfield picked the trio up while enroute home from the Armistice Day celebrations here. Hardly had he started his machine again when one of the trio pressed a pistol into his side and forced the general to drive to a lonely spot near Merion where he was robbed.

BLISS BURIED WITH MILITARY HONORS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—General Tasker H. Bliss, wartime chief of staff and member of the American peace commission at Versailles, was laid at rest today in Arlington National Cemetery with full military honors.

His body was accompanied to the grave by Newton D. Baker, secretary of war when Bliss was chief of staff; General John J. Pershing and other wartime associates. Pallbearers were enlisted men who attended him at Walter Reed Hospital where he died Sunday, twenty years lacking two days after the World War ended.

Funeral services were held first at the home and then at Washington Cathedral where Bishop James E. Freeman officiated.

EINSTEIN COMING

BERLIN, Nov. 12.—Professor Albert Einstein, the world famous scientist and mathematician, is planning to visit the United States shortly, it was learned here today.

"It will be strictly a private trip," Mrs. Einstein told International News Service. She declined to reveal the date when she and her husband will leave.

MRS. JOE SAVOLDI

Joe Savoldi, Notre Dame's brilliant fullback, has announced he will attempt to have his marriage to Mrs. Audrey Koehler Savoldi, of South Bend, Ind., annulled. The football star says he married Mrs. Savoldi April 2, 1929, but that the couple never lived together.

LOWEST CORN YIELD SINCE 1893 BELIEF OF FARMING EXPERT

Production In Ohio 38,000,000 Bushels Less Than 1929

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 12.—The lowest yield of corn recorded in Ohio since 1893 was forecast today by A. R. Tuttle, agricultural statistician of the federal crop reporting service here. Tuttle's November estimate was approximately 90,602,000 bushels or 10 per cent more than the October forecast.

Production this season is about 35,000,000 bushels less than last year and 32 per cent below the 5-year average, Tuttle stated. Indications point to a yield of 25.5 bushels per acre.

The Ohio potato yield was considerably more than was expected one month ago. The 1931 potato crop is estimated at 9,450,000 bushels which is about 1,000,000 bushels less than last year and around 15 per cent less than the 5-year average. The indicated yield is 90 bushels per acre, or about average, only six bushels per acre less than last year.

The early potato crop was rather poor because of the drought during the early part of the season, Tuttle's report stated.

Preliminary estimates indicate a tobacco crop of $46,645,000 pounds compared with 40,881,000 last season. The crop is about 13 per cent above the 5-year average.

Sugar beets were estimated at 254,000 tons in comparison with 174,000 tons last year. Late rains were beneficial to the beets, bringing the estimates far above the early expectations.

Soybean acreage was placed at 49,000 acres, the same as last year; the yield per acre at 14 bushels, and the total production at 686,000 bushels.

The November report shows some improvements in Ohio fruits. Late rains were especially beneficial to the late crop. Apples were estimated at 3,640,000 bushels; pears, 190,000 bushels and grapes, 246,000 tons.

TUNNEY, JUBILANT FACES ANOTHER FOE

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Gene Tunney, jubilant over the legal knockout he scored against Tim Mara, New York sports promoter who sued him for $526,000 "breach of contract" and didn't get a cent, today went into mental training for another courtroom bout. Tunney's next opponent will be Max ("Boo Boo") Hoff, a well known sporting character of Philadelphia.

Hoff claims the retired heavyweight champion of the world owes him approximately $348,000. He alleges that on the eve of Tunney's fight with Jack Dempsey in Philadelphia, September 23, 1926, Tunney signed a contract to pay him one-fifth of his earnings in return for $20,000 in cash Hoff says he advanced to Billy Gibson, Tunney's manager. Hoff declares Tunney agreed to give him the one fifth "cut" on his future earnings if he won the championship—which he did.

The shooting took place in front of the home of Mrs. C. H. Amos, Mrs. Gibson's daughter, with whom she lived. Police learned that Place had followed the woman home from work and as she was about to enter the house, fired two shots into her body. She was wounded in the abdomen and in the breast.

Jealousy was believed to have prompted the act.

BRITAIN PROMISES SELF-GOVERNMENT AS MEETING STARTS

King George, Premier MacDonald Assure Potentates

LONDON, Nov. 12.—A promise from the throne, echoed by Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald, that India will be granted self-government in a form to be determined by the conference itself, was made by King George today in his speech opening the long-awaited round table conference on India.

The king's address, heard by the eighty-sixth conference delegates in the royal gallery of the house of lords and a distinguished assemblage that included United States Ambassador and Mrs. Dawes, took only seven minutes. Immediately at its conclusion he bowed to all present and left the gallery.

"It is my hope," the king said, "that the future government of India, based upon the foundation of self-government, will give expression to her honorable aspirations."

When the king's speech was concluded, Premier MacDonald was chosen permanent chairman of the conference.

"Responsibility lies heavily upon us all. For we are now at the very birth of new history," said the premier. "The declarations made by British sovereigns and statesmen from time to time that Great Britain's work in India was to prepare her for self-government have been plain."

"We have met to try to register for agreement and recognition of the fact that India has reached a distinctive point in her constitutional evolution. Surely the simple fact that we have come here to sit at one table with the set sole purpose of India's advancement within the championship of the commonwealth is in itself an undeniable sign of progress toward that end and also an inspiring challenge to reach agreement."

Elaborate precautions were taken against demonstrations by extremists at the opening of the conference. A huge uniformed guard was assigned inside the house of lords in addition to scores of detectives inside and outside the building.

The Gaekwar of Baroda followed Premier MacDonald. He stressed the gravity of the problems to be met by the conference, stating that never before had the issues so "involved the prosperity of India's millions and the greatness of the British Empire."

Other speakers were Sir Muhammad Akbar Hydari, V. S. Srinivasa Sastry, Mr. Bape, representing Burma, and the Maharajah of Jammu and Kashmir. The last three stressed India's desire for dominion status.

M. A. Jinnah, British Indian delegate, concluded the speeches. Following appointment of a steering committee the conference adjourned until Monday, when it will meet at St. James' palace.

Sixteen princes of fabulous wealth, who rule with gorgeous magnificence over vast states in India, are providing the spectacular side of the round table conference.

They represent the largest, most powerful and wealthiest congregation of Indian princes who have gathered in London for twenty years.

They have come as free negotiating parties and are entirely separate and distinct from the other representatives.

These princes rule over an area four times that of England and Wales, from which they receive an annual revenue of more than $50,000,000.

Most striking of them all is the Maharajah of Alwar, who wears a turquoise-colored turban, diamond earrings and gold bangles. He stands very erect, a handsome eagle-eyed eastern potentate six feet tall, and when he appears in public is surrounded by a retinue of secretaries.

MAN SHOTS WIFE, COMMITS SUICIDE

DAYTON, O., Nov. 12.—William Place, 38, of Detroit, is dead, and his former wife, Mrs. Harry Gilson, 36, of Dayton, was in a critical condition today as the result of an attempted murder and suicide.

Mrs. Gilson was wounded twice by Place who then turned the gun on himself and committed suicide. Physicians said the woman could not live.

The shooting took place in front of the home of Mrs. C. H. Amos, Mrs. Gilson's daughter, with whom she lived. Police learned that Place had followed the woman home from work and as she was about to enter the house, fired two shots into her body. She was wounded in the abdomen and in the breast.

Jealousy was believed to have prompted the act.

LOVE'S LABOR LOST

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Two hundred tons of applications for patents, accumulated during the last twenty years will be destroyed within the next eight months at the direction of Commissioner Thomas E. Robertson, of the patent office, it was announced today.

There are more than 750,000 files in connection with abandoned patent applications to be restored or returned to applicants, for the reason that the patent office found nothing patentable in the devices represented or for reasons known only to the inventors.

The patent office has erected over twenty-five miles of shelving to take care of patent files. Since the office was organized in 1836, 1,780,895 patents have been granted.

STUDENT RIOTS BRING MARTIAL LAW IN CUBA

HAVANA, Nov. 12.—Martial law was in force in several cities of Cuba today, following new outbreaks of student riots and demonstrations in protest against the government's order closing Cuban colleges until January.

Santiago, Matanzas and Camaguey were taken over by the military, soldiers patrolling the streets on foot and in armored cars with orders to break up all gatherings immediately.

The order for martial law was promulgated following a serious demonstration at Camaguey, where many were reported injured in a clash with police who attempted to break up a student protest meeting.

In Santiago, police had great difficulty maintaining order among a crowd of thousands attending the funeral of a student killed in the first outbreak of rioting on Monday.

A situation tantamount to martial law existed in Havana also, where the ministry of the interior took over municipal authority, issuing orders to the police.

EXCITEMENT STILL HIGH AFTER VETERANS RAID OPEN GROCERY

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Nov. 12.—This little town was still rife with excitement today over the demonstration of protest staged by a group of ex-soldiers yesterday.

REPUBLICAN SPLIT OVER PROHIBITION SEEN; FESS TARGET

Party Chairman Firm On Dry Position; Wets Ired

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Predictions of a Republican split over prohibition in 1932 seemed well on the way to fulfillment today as prominent wets and dries in the party hammered away at each other in lusty fashion.

The immediate target of the wets was Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, the bone-dry chairman of the Republican national committee, and the frequent champion of the Anti-Saloon League on the senate floor.

There is a well-defined movement afoot to replace Fess as chairman, not so much on account of the reverses the party suffered last week under his direction, but because he has laid down the ultimatum that the Republicans must stay dry.

"The Republican party will stay dry or it will split," said Fess, grimly in earnest.

This challenge has promptly been accepted by leading wets in the party, who have been greatly heartened by the anti-prohibition wave that swept last Tuesday's elections. They are demanding to know whether the Republicans of New York, Illinois, New Jersey, and other influential states are to be ignored in the 1932 convention.

"The trouble with Senator Fess," said Ex-Senator James W. Wadsworth of New York, "is that he cannot see what is going on in this country. Fess is blind sight. We want our party to be right up on the only fundamental constitutional issue that has arisen since the days of the Civil War, and we will fight to make it right, split or no split."

To which was added this comment from Rep. Fred Britten (R) of Illinois, one of the wet leaders in the house:

"If Senator Fess is so blind or

YOUTH CELEBRATES ARMISTICE WITH PISTOL

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 12.—Eleven-year-old Paul Drescher probably celebrated Armistice Day more realistically than anyone else in Pittsburgh.

Paul went to a movie yesterday afternoon. It was an exciting picture. But the excitement of the movie was completely paled when the spectators were gripped by the deafening report of a revolver. The bullet lodged in the floor.

Paul was taken to the police station, much to the disappointment of the crowd. He could not explain why the revolver had discharged. It belonged to his father, he said, and he was carrying it in celebration of the twelfth anniversary of

The boy gave the name of a boy friend instead of his own. He later admitted it wasn't his name.

"Why, a year ago he gave my name when he was arrested and I was just getting even with him," he replied when his questioners asked why he had given the wrong name.

BANDITS KILL THREE, WOUND ANOTHER WHEN HUNTING FOR TREASURE

WATER FROM MINE TO AVERT SHORTAGE

BARNESVILLE, O., Nov. 12.—Nearly 200 million gallons of water which was found in an abandoned coal mine near here is to be piped to Barnesville homes, it was decided today, in order to relieve the city's water shortage.

ONE GUNMAN WOUNDED; ATTACK FARMERS FOR BURIED LOOT

BOSCOBEL, Wis., Nov. 12.—Posses searched five Wisconsin counties today for three bandits and a woman accomplice who shot and killed three men and critically wounded a fourth in a raid on a wealthy farmer's home for a buried treasure.

Hunt for the bandits spread into Allamakee County in Iowa. One of the killers was seriously wounded in a gun battle which followed the slayings, but his companions succeeded in carrying him to their automobile and they escaped.

The dead are: Patrick Gorman, 65; his son, Paul, 18; and Cornelius Horrihan, 60, a brother-in-law of Gorman's. Stephen Horrihan, a brother of the dead man, was seriously wounded in a gun battle with the assailants and was not expected to live.

The Horrihans, on whose farm the killings took place, were wealthy, and much of their wealth is said to be buried on the farm which is in a secluded location.

An automobile drew up at the farm late yesterday and three young men and a girl stepped out and entered the Horrihan home where the four men were at dinner.

"We want that treasure," one of the men said. "So stick 'em up."

All three flashed pistols and when young Paul Gorman reached for a pistol in his hip pocket they opened fire, killing Paul Gorman and his father on the spot and fatally wounding Cornelius Horrihan. Stephen Horrihan procured a shotgun and opened fire on the quartet, wounding one of the gunmen seriously. All four then fled.

PRINCE TAKES RIDE IN "FLYING HOTEL"

CALSHOT AERODROME, Southampton, England, Nov. 12.—The Prince of Wales today made a twenty-five minute flight in the German flying boat DO-X immediately after arriving here from Hendon Aerodrome, near London. The huge ship took off perfectly and made a graceful landing as it returned to the harbor.

The prince, who is a keen aviation enthusiast and a licensed pilot himself, appeared much interested in the great ship's performance.

AUTOIST ACCUSED OF MANSLAUGHTER

HAMILTON, O., Nov. 12.—J. E. Holmes, 35, of Aurora, Ind., was held by police here today on a warrant charging him with manslaughter in connection with the death of 7-year-old William J. Beaver.

The boy was killed instantly yesterday afternoon when he was struck by Holmes' automobile as he dashed across a street near St. Stephen's school when he heard the Armistice Day parade passing one block away.

CONVICT ESCAPES FROM BRICK PLANT

NEW LEXINGTON, O., Nov. 12.—Deputy Warden H. G. Blosser and several guards of the state prison brick plant at Junction City, near here, today sought James Lanier, Perry County prisoner, who escaped yesterday.

Lanier, a trusty serving from three to 15 years for burglary, drove Chief Clerk E. E. Stewart to the Junction City post office for mail. But Lanier didn't wait for the mail. He drove away in Stewart's automobile while the clerk was in the post office.

HOPE FOR SANCTION

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—Despite a previous veto by the Big Ten faculty committee, interested charities today hoped for sanction of the Northwestern Notre Dame football clash November 22 in Soldier Field stadium so that $150,000 may be raised for unemployment relief.

WEALTHY PITTSBURGH WOMAN IS DROWNED; SUICIDE CHARGED

BLUE HILL, Me., Nov. 12.—Suicide by drowning was the verdict today in the death of Miss Alice R. Davidson, 51, member of a wealthy Pittsburgh, Pa., family for whom a search by airplane and posse of 250 persons had been made since November 3 and a reward of $1500 posted.

The body was found resting on a piling beneath a small boat landing, near her summer home at Parker's Point, by Max Hinckley, his son and another boy.

Acting Medical Examiner R. N. V. Bliss declared it was a case of suicide by drowning. Whether the body drifted across the bay from the Davidson summer home at Parker's Point, by Max Hinckley, woman had walked to the landing and jumped off. Dr. Bliss could not determine. The spot where the body was found was two miles from the Falls bridge, where a button from Miss Davidson's coat was found.

Miss Davidson, suffering from a nervous disorder, had spent the summer here with her mother. They were to have left for Pittsburgh last Friday. Funeral arrangements were being made today.

VELMA STUDYING

Here is the latest photo of Velma West, Painesville, O., hammer slayer, who is serving a life sentence at the women's reformatory at Marysville, O. Velma, who confessed she killed her husband in 1927 because he objected to her activities in a love cult, is taking a stenographic course by correspondence, and has hopes of being paroled in a few years. She is in "solitary confinement" for an infraction of the rules, although in Marysville that means a comfortably furnished room, not a cell.

OHIO REFORMATORY GUARDS SUSPENDED FOLLOWING ESCAPE

Six Prisoners Who Fled Captured Later In Day

MANSFIELD, O., Nov. 12.—Two guards at the Ohio State Reformatory here, were under suspension today as a result of the escape of six prisoners yesterday. The break for liberty was made after the youths had saved the bars from a window in "D" dormitory.

All the prisoners were captured yesterday. Two of them were seized in a woods near the Empire Steel Corporation plant shortly after the escape. Another was arrested by police at Akron last night, and the other three were taken into custody in Cleveland.

Those arrested at Cleveland were Joe Miner, Cleveland; Clark Walton, Columbus, and John Savchick, Youngstown. Leslie Brown, Cleveland, and Charles Plannery, Cincinnati, were captured an hour and a half after the escape. Paul Mallich, of Athens, was taken into custody by Akron police at the home of his sweetheart.

The two guards who were suspended were A. H. Morris, assigned to duty inside "D" dormitory and G. A. Wheaton, was assigned to duty outside the building. Their suspensions will be effective for thirty days. Superintendent T. C. Jenkins said the break could have been prevented. He charged the guards with being negligent.

Eighty other prisoners refused to join in the escape, Jenkins said.

PAROLE FIFTY-THREE

LONDON, O., Nov. 12.—Fifty-three inmates of the London State Prison Farm here were paroled today by the Ohio board of clemency. The list represents one of the largest number of paroles ever granted at the institution. Ninety cases were considered by the board.

Ninety took off from Charlotte, N. C., at 10:15 last night for Greensboro, N. C., with a five hours supply of gasoline. No word was heard from his until after daybreak this morning.

The air mail was put on a train here and sent to Greensboro. It was salvaged from the plane, which was badly damaged.

DAUGHERTY SEEKS TO REMOVE JUDGE

WASHINGTON, C. H. O., Nov. 12.—Chief Justice C. T. Marshall, of the Ohio supreme court, will hear arguments here this afternoon relative to the application of M. S. Daugherty, former president of the defunct Ohio State bank here, for the removal of Common Pleas Judge Harry M. Rankin as trial judge in the case of Daugherty who has been indicted on charges of mishandling the bank's funds.

Daugherty claims that Rankin is biased and prejudiced against him. Justice Marshall will decide whether Rankin or some other judge will try the case.

ARMORY DEDICATION MARKS OBSERVANCE OF ARMISTICE HERE

Impressive Ceremony, Parade And Dance Feature Day

Memories of twelve years ago were revived Tuesday when Xenians joined with the nation in re-dedicating themselves to the cause of peace and also formally dedicated the city's new $50,000 National Guard armory in a community celebration which climaxed an elaborate observance of Armistice Day.

Constructed by the state on a site in the Dadds Addition north of Shawnee Park, which had been deeded to the state of Ohio by the city, the new structure was formally presented to the community and to Company L, 147th Infantry, Ohio National Guard, on behalf of the state by Adjutant General Arthur W. Reynolds.

The building was accepted for the community by State Representative R. D. Williamson inasmuch as it was largely due to his efforts that the $50,000 appropriation to finance erection of the armory was passed by the state legislature.

Captain O. H. Cornwall, commanding officer of Company L, made the formal acceptance talk to the local guard unit. The Rev. Lawrence Vessel, member of the armory advisory council, pronounced the invocation.

The principal dedicatory address was delivered by Dr. W. R. McClesney, president of Cedarville College.

Among regimental officers present for the dedication ceremonies were Col. Hugo Rudolph, commander of the 147th Infantry; Major James F. Murphy, Major C. A. King, Major A. R. Thomas and Sergeant Preston Parsons, of Cincinnati. Music for the occasion was supplied by massed bands.

Preceding the dedicatory program, military, civic and fraternal organizations as well as school children participated in a street parade through the center of the business district to the armory, and the long procession was reviewed by officials and distinguished guests from a stand placed on N. Detroit St. in front of the west entrance to the Court House.

Dr. B. R. McClesney acted as grand marshal for the parade with Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman, L. A. Davis, county road patrolman, and Miss Dorothy Andrews as his aides. Despite threatening weather hundreds of spectators lined the street curbs to watch the mammoth procession march along to the strains of martial music.

The procession included school children in the Xenia public and parochial schools led by the uniformed Xenia Central High School thirty-piece band, a delegation from Fairfield and Osborn led by the Bath Twp. Consolidated School

MAIL PILOT IS SAVED BY JUMP

Leaps From Plane In Thick Fog

SHELBY, N. C., Nov. 12.—Hopelessly fighting his way through a thick fog, and his gasoline supply exhausted, Dick Merrill flying a northbound New York-Atlanta air mail plane, today was forced to take to his parachute and jump.

He was found, unhurt save for a slightly sprained ankle, about 20 miles west of here. He made a descent in a field in a isolated section and it was some time before he could communicate with airport officials at Greensboro.

Merrill took off from Charlotte, N. C., at 10:15 last night for Greensboro, N. C., with a five hours supply of gasoline. No word was heard from his until after daybreak this morning.

The air mail was put on a train here and sent to Greensboro. It was salvaged from the plane, which was badly damaged.

"It is my hope," the king said, "that the future government of India, based upon the foundation of self-government, will give expression to her honorable aspirations."

When the king's speech was concluded, Premier MacDonald was chosen permanent chairman of the conference.

"Responsibility lies heavily upon us all. For we are now at the very birth of new history," said the premier. "The declarations made by British sovereigns and statesmen from time to time that Great Britain's work in India was to prepare her for self-government have been plain."

"We have met to try to register for agreement and recognition of the fact that India has reached a distinctive point in her constitutional evolution. Surely the simple fact that we have come here to sit at one table with the set sole purpose of India's advancement within the championship of the commonwealth is in itself an undeniable sign of progress toward that end and also an inspiring challenge to reach agreement."

Elaborate precautions were taken against demonstrations by extremists at the opening of the conference. A huge uniformed guard was assigned inside the house of lords in addition to scores of detectives inside and outside the building.

The Gaspar of Baroda followed Premier MacDonald. He stressed the gravity of the problems to be met by the conference, stating that never before had the issues so "involved the prosperity of India's millions and the greatness of the British Empire."

Other speakers were Sir Muhammad Akbar Hydar, V. S. Srinivasa Sastri, Mr. B. J. P. representing Burma, and the Maharajah of Jammu and Kashmir. The last three stressed India's desire for dominion status.

"M. A. Jinnah, British Indian delegate, concluded the speeches. Following appointment of a steering committee the conference adjourned until Monday, when it will meet at St. James palace.

Sixteen princes of fabulous wealth, who rule with gorgeous magnificence over vast states in India, are providing the spectacular side of the round table conference.

They represent the largest, most powerful and wealthiest congregation of Indian princes who have gathered in London for twenty years.

They have come as free negotiating parties and are entirely separate and distinct from the other representatives.

These princes rule over an area four times that of England and Wales, from which they receive an annual revenue of more than $50,000,000.

Most striking of them all is the Maharajah of Alwar, who wears a turquoise-colored turban, diamond earrings and gold bangles. He stands very erect, a handsome eagle-eyed eastern potentate six feet tall, and when he appears in public is surrounded by a retinue of secretaries.

MAN SHOTS WIFE, COMMITS SUICIDE

DAYTON, O., Nov. 12.—William Place, 35, of Detroit, is dead, and his former wife, Mrs. Harry Gilson, 36, of Dayton, was in a critical condition today as the result of an attempted murder and suicide.

Mrs. Gilson was wounded twice by Place who then turned the gun on himself and committed suicide. Physicians said the woman could not live.

The shooting took place in front of the home of Mrs. C. H. Amon. Mrs. Gilson's daughter, with whom she lived, Police learned that Place had followed the woman home from work and as she was about to enter the house, fired two shots into her body. She was wounded in the abdomen and in the breast.

Jealousy was believed to have prompted the act.

LOVE'S LABOR LOST

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Two hundred tons of applications for patents, accumulated during the last twenty years will be destroyed within the next eight months at the direction of Commissioner Thomas E. Robertson, of the patent office, it was announced today.

There are more than 750,000 files in connection with abandoned patent applications to be restored or returned to applicants, for the reason that the patent office found nothing patentable in the devices represented or for reasons known only to the inventors.

The patent office has erected over twenty-five miles of shelving to take care of patent files. Since the office was organized in 1836, 1,780,895 patents have been granted.

STUDENT RIOTS BRING MARTIAL LAW IN CUBA

HAVANA, Nov. 12.—Martial law was in force in several cities of Cuba today, following new outbreaks of student riots and demonstrations in protest against the government's order closing Cuban colleges until January.

Santiago, Matanzas and Camaguey were taken over by the military, soldiers patrolling the streets on foot and in armored cars with orders to break up all gatherings immediately.

The order for martial law was promulgated following a serious

REPUBLICAN SPLIT OVER PROHIBITION SEEN; FESS TARGET

Party Chairman Firm On Dry Position; Wets Ired

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Predictions of a Republican split over prohibition in 1932 seemed well on the way to fulfillment today as prominent wets and dries in the party hammered away at each other in lusty fashion.

The immediate target of the wets is Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, the bone-dry chairman of the Republican national committee, and the frequent champion of the Anti-Saloon League on the senate floor. There is a well-defined movement afoot to replace Fess as chairman, not so much on account of the reverses the party suffered last week under his direction, but because he has laid down the ultimatum that the Republicans must stay dry.

"The Republican party will stay dry or it will split," said Fess, grimly in earnest.

This challenge has promptly been accepted by leading wets in the party, who have been greatly heartened by the anti-prohibition vote that swept last Tuesday's elections. They are demanding to know whether the Republicans of New York, Illinois, New Jersey, and other influential states are to be ignored in the 1932 convention.

"The trouble with Senator Fess," said Ex-Senator James W. Wadsworth of New York, "is that he cannot see what is going on in this country. Tears dim his sight. We want our party to be right up on the only fundamental constitutional issue that has arisen since the days of the Civil War, and we will fight to make it right, split or no split."

To which was added this comment from Rep. Fred Britten (R) of Illinois, one of the wet leaders in the house: "If Senator Fess is so blind or

YOUTH CELEBRATES ARMISTICE WITH PISTOL

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 12.—Eleven-year-old Paul Drescher probably celebrated Armistice Day more realistically than anyone else in Pittsburgh.

Paul went to a movie yesterday afternoon. It was an exciting picture. The movie was completely paled when the spectators were gripped by the deafening report of a revolver. The bullet lodged in the floor.

Paul was taken to the police station, much to the disappointment of the crowd. He could not explain why the revolver had been discharged. It belonged to his father, he said, and he was carrying it in celebration of the twelfth anniversary of Armistice Day.

The boy gave the name of a boy friend instead of his own. He later admitted it wasn't his name.

"Why, a year ago he gave my name when he was arrested and I was just getting even with him," he replied when his questioners asked why he had given the wrong name.

BANDITS KILL THREE, WOUND ANOTHER WHEN HUNTING FOR TREASURE

WATER FROM MINE TO AVERT SHORTAGE

BARNESVILLE, O., Nov. 12.—Nearly 200 million gallons of water which was found in an abandoned coal mine near here is to be used today, in order to relieve the city's water shortage.

ONE GUNMAN WOUNDED; ATTACK FARMERS FOR BURIED LOOT

BOSCOBEL, Wis., Nov. 12.—Posses searched five Wisconsin counties today for three bandits and a woman accomplice who shot and killed three men and critically wounded a fourth in a raid on a wealthy farmer's home for a buried treasure.

Hunt for the bandits spread into Allamakee County in Iowa. One of the killers was seriously wounded in a gun battle which followed the slayings, but his companions succeeded in carrying him to their automobile and they escaped.

The dead are: Patrick Gorman, 65; his son, Paul, 18; and Cornelius Horrigan, 60, a brother-in-law of Gorman's. Stephen Horrigan, a brother of the dead man, was seriously wounded in a gun battle with the assailants and was not expected to live.

The Horrigans, on whose farm the killings took place, were wealthy, and much of their wealth is said to be buried on the farm which is in a secluded location.

An automobile drew up at the farm late yesterday and three young men and a girl stepped out and entered the Horrigan home where the four men were at dinner.

"We want that treasure," one of the men said. "So stick 'em up."

All three flashed pistols and when young Paul Gorman reached for a pistol in his hip pocket they opened fire, killing Paul Gorman and his father on the spot and fatally wounding Cornelius Horrigan.

Although wounded in the arm, Stephen Horrigan procured a shotgun and opened fire on the quartet, wounding one of the gunmen seriously. All four then fled.

PRINCE TAKES RIDE IN "FLYING HOTEL"

CALSHOT AERODROME, Southampton, England, Nov. 12.—The Prince of Wales today made a twenty-five minute flight in the German flying boat DO-X immediately after arriving here from Hendon Aerodrome, near London. The huge ship took off perfectly and made a graceful landing as it returned to the harbor.

The prince, who is a keen aviation enthusiast and a licensed pilot, appeared much interested in the great ship's performance.

AUTOIST ACCUSED OF MANSLAUGHTER

HAMILTON, O., Nov. 12.—J. E. Holm, 35, of Aurora, Ind., was held by police here today on a warrant charging him with manslaughter in connection with the death of 7-year-old William J. Beaver.

The boy was killed instantly yesterday afternoon when he was struck by Holmes' automobile as he dashed across a street near St. Stephen's school when he heard the Armistice Day parade passing one block away.

CONVICT ESCAPES FROM BRICK PLANT

NEW LEXINGTON, O., Nov. 12.—Deputy Warden H. G. Blosser and several guards of the state prison brick plant at Junction City, near here, today sought James Lanier, Perry County prisoner, who escaped yesterday.

Lanier, a trusty serving from three to 15 years for burglary, drove Chief Clerk E. E. Stewart to the Junction City post office for mail. But Lanier didn't wait for the mail. He drove away in Stewart's automobile while the clerk was in the post office.

HOPE FOR SANCTION

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—Despite a previous veto by the Big Ten faculty committee, interested charities today hoped for sanction of the Northwestern Notre Dame football clash November 22 in Soldier Field stadium so that $150,000 may be raised for unemployment relief.

WEALTHY PITTSBURGH WOMAN IS DROWNED; SUICIDE CHARGED

BLUE HILL, Me., Nov. 12.—Suicide by drowning was the verdict today in the death of Miss Alice R. Davidson, 51, member of a wealthy Pittsburgh, Pa., family for whom a search by airplane and posse of 250 persons had been made since November 3 and a reward of $1,500 posted.

The body was found resting on a piling beneath a small boat landing, near her summer home at Parker's Point, by Max Hinkley, his son and another boy.

Acting Medical Examiner R. N. V. Bliss declared it was a case of suicide by drowning. Whether the body drifted across the bay from the Davidson summer home at Parker's Point, by Max Hinkley, woman had walked to the landing and jumped off, Dr. Bliss could not determine. The spot where the body was found was two miles from the Falls bridge, where a button from Miss Davidson's coat was found.

Miss Davidson, suffering from a nervous disorder, had spent the summer here with her mother. They were to have left for Pittsburgh last Friday. Funeral arrangements were being made today.

VELMA STUDYING

Here is the latest photo of Velma West, Painesville, O., hammer slayer, who is serving a life sentence at the women's reformatory at Marysville, O. Velma, who confessed she killed her husband in 1927 because he objected to her activities in a love cult, is taking a stenographic course by correspondence, and has hopes of being paroled in a few years. She is in "solitary confinement" for an infraction of the rules, although in Marysville that means a comfortably furnished room, not a cell.

OHIO REFORMATORY GUARDS SUSPENDED FOLLOWING ESCAPE

Six Prisoners Who Fled Captured Later In Day

MANSFIELD, O., Nov. 12.—Two guards at the Ohio State Reformatory here, were under suspension today as a result of the escape of six prisoners yesterday. The break for liberty was made after the youths had saved the bars from a window in "D" dormitory.

All the prisoners were captured yesterday. Two of them were seized in a woods near the Empire Steel corporation plant shortly after the escape. Another was arrested by police at Akron last night, and the other three were taken into custody in Cleveland.

Those arrested at Cleveland were Joe Miner, Cleveland; Clark Walton, Columbus, and John Savchick, Youngstown, Leslie Brown, Cleveland, and Charles Flannery, Cincinnati, were captured an hour and a half after the escape. Paul Malloch, of Athens, was taken into custody by Akron police at the home of his sweetheart.

The two guards who were suspended were A. H. Morris, assigned to duty inside "D" dormitory and G. A. Wheaton, was assigned to duty outside the building. Their suspensions will be effective for thirty days. Superintendent T. C. Jenkins said the break could have been prevented. He charged the guards with being negligent.

Eighty other prisoners refused to join in the escape, Jenkins said.

PAROLE FIFTY-THREE

WASHINGTON, N. C., Nov. 12.—Hopes for a safe landing of a mail plane, today was forced to take to his parachute and jump.

He was found, unharmed save for a slightly sprained ankle, about 20 miles west of here. He made a descent in a field in a isolated section and it was some time before he could communicate with airport officials at Greensboro.

Merrill took off from Charlotte, N. C., at 10:15 last night for Greensboro, N. C., with a five hours supply of gasoline. No word was heard from his until after daybreak this morning.

The mail plane was put on a train here and sent to Greensboro. It was salvaged from the plane, which was badly damaged.

DAUGHERTY SEEKS TO REMOVE JUDGE

WASHINGTON, C. H. O., Nov. 12.—Chief Justice C. T. Marshall, of the Ohio supreme court, will hear arguments here this afternoon relative to the application of M. S. Daugherty, former president of the defunct Ohio State bank here, for the removal of Common Pleas Judge Harry M. Rankin as trial judge in the case of Daugherty who has been indicted on charges of mishandling the bank's funds.

Daugherty claims that Rankin is biased and prejudiced against him. Justice Marshall will decide whether Rankin or some other judge will try the case.

ARMORY DEDICATION MARKS OBSERVANCE OF ARMISTICE HERE

Impressive Ceremony, Parade And Dance Feature Day

Memories of twelve years ago were revived Tuesday when Xenians joined with the nation in re-dedicating themselves to the cause of peace and also formally dedicated the city's new $50,000 National Guard armory in a community celebration which climaxed an elaborate observance of Armistice Day.

Constructed by the state on a site in the Dadds Addition north of Shawnee Park, which had been deeded to the state of Ohio by the city, the new structure was formally presented to the community and to Company L, 147th Infantry, Ohio National Guard, on behalf of the state by Adjutant General Arthur W. Reynolds.

The building was accepted for the community by State Representative R. D. Williamson inasmuch as it was largely due to his efforts that the $50,000 appropriation to finance creation of the armory was passed by the state legislature.

Captain O. H. Cornwell, commanding officer of Company L, made the formal acceptance talk to the local guard unit. The Rev. Lawrence Vessel, member of the army advisory council, pronounced the invocation.

The principal dedicatory address was delivered by Dr. W. R. McClesney, president of Cedarville College.

Among regimental officers present for the dedication ceremonies were Col. Hugo Rudolph, commander of the 147th Infantry; Major James F. Murphy, Major C. A. King, Major A. E. Thomas and Sergeant Preston Parsons, of Cincinnati. Music for the occasion was supplied by massed bands.

Preceding the dedicatory program, military, civic and fraternal organizations as well as school children participated in a street parade through the center of the business district to the armory, and the long procession was reviewed by officials and distinguished guests from a stand placed on N. Detroit St. in front of the west entrance to the Court House.

Dr. B. R. McClellan acted as grand marshal for the parade with Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman, L. A. Davis, county road patrolman, and Miss Dorothy Andrews as his aides. Despite threatening weather hundreds of spectators lined the street curbs to witness the mammoth procession march along to the strains of martial music.

The procession included school children in the Xenia public and parochial schools led by the uniformed Xenia Central High School band, a delegation from Fairfield and Osborn led by the Bath Twp. Consolidated School so intolerant that he cannot analyze the desires of the millions of voters in the progressive northern states, the national committee should elect another chairman before the arid senator further depresses the party."

The wets contend that Fess' bone-dry dictum comes at this time when his own state of Ohio has just deserted prohibition to the extent of electing a "wringing wet" Democrat to the senate in a campaign in which prohibition was the chief issue.

In any event, they want his official scalp and propose to get it. The party chairmanship, of course, is the prerogative of the President. The dry Ohioan was placed in the office by President Hoover's direction. He will remain until Mr. Hoover indicates a desire to have him replaced, irrespective of how much the wets may desire him ousted.

If the opposition, however, gets too strong, Mr. Hoover may be prevailed upon to act if for no other reason than to preserve peace in the party. Mr. Hoover presumably intends to be a candidate for reelection in 1932, and the prohibition issue will be troublesome enough anyway without the added factor of a party chairman who is the target of a considerable section of the party.

The expectation prevails in Washington that after congress meets and the Wickersham commission has made some sort of a report it will be announced that Fess' senatorial duties have become so arduous that they will no longer permit his occupancy of the chairmanship of the party.

The procession wended its way to the armory building, where it disbanded for the dedicatory program, which closed with the lowering of the flag over the armory for the first time as the bands blared for the strains of the "Star Spangled Banner." opened with a banquet held at Masonic Temple at 6 o'clock and covers for 250 guests were laid.

Harry E. Rice, Xenia newspaper publisher, served as toastmaster for the banquet and called upon the following persons for brief talks: Adjutant General Arthur Reynolds, Col. Hugo Rudolph, Major A. R. Thomas, Major C. A. King, Major James Murphy, of the 147th Regiment, City Manager M. C. Smith, Captain Charles L. Darlington, a past commander of the Ohio department, American Legion; Captain O. H. Cornwell; Representative R. D. Williamson, Captain Harold L. Hays, superintendent of the O. S. and S. O. Home and T. H. Zell, former city auditor, who was one of the leading proponents of the original agitation to obtain the armory.

The dinner was followed by a concert played by the Home Band, after which the day's celebration culminated with a military ball in the spacious auditorium at armory, with several hundred persons in attendance. Michael Hauer's popular orchestra of Dayton furnished the music for dancing which lasted from 8 to 12 o'clock.

In observance of Armistice Day and in view of the armory dedication exercises a majority of Xenia merchants closed their business houses at noon Tuesday, while public offices and financial institutions observed a full holiday.

The city-wide observance was inaugurated in the morning with annual Armistice Day chapel services at the O. S. and S. O. Home at 10:30 o'clock, attended by Legionnaires, members of Company L and many visitors. Dr. B. R. McClellan, chaplain of Foody Post, American Legion, gave the invocation, and Paul Fuller, commander of the post, read the Legion constitution.

At 11 o'clock the firing of a cannon signified the beginning of a two-minute period of silence, marking the exact day of the month when the Armistice terminated the end twelve years ago of the greatest conflict of all time. This silent period was generally observed also throughout Xenia and the nation. Booming of the cannon also marked the close of the two-minute period of silence. Taps sounded by buglers closed the service.

As soon as you touch your starter KOOLMOTOR vaporizes quickly, ignites promptly. In addition, it leaves no harmful, clogging gum that sticks your valves. Sticky, gummy valves are one of the important causes of delayed winter starting.

Here is another point to remember when choosing your winter gasoline: KOOLMOTOR gives quick winter starting without loss of mileage and without sacrificing any other feature of gasoline performance, such as pick-up, power, anti-knock, etc.

opened with a banquet held at Masonic Temple at 6 o'clock and covers for 250 guests were laid. Harry E. Rice, Xenia newspaper publisher, served as toastmaster for the banquet and called upon the following persons for brief talks: Adjutant General Arthur Reynolds, Col. Hugo Rudolph, Major A. R. Thomas, Major C. A. King, Major James Murphy, of the 147th Regiment, City Manager M. C. Smith, Captain Charles L. Darlington, a past commander of the Ohio department, American Legion; Captain O. H. Cornwell; Representative R. D. Williamson, Captain Harold L. Hays, superintendent of the O. S. and S. O. Home and T. H. Zell, former city auditor, who was one of the leading proponents of the original agitation to obtain the armory.

The dinner was followed by a concert played by the Home Band, after which the day's celebration culminated with a military ball in the spacious auditorium at armory, with a hundred persons in attendance. Michael Hauser's popular orchestra of Dayton furnished the music for dancing which lasted from 8 to 12 o'clock.

In observance of Armistice Day and in view of the armory dedication exercises a majority of Xenia merchants closed their business houses at noon Tuesday, while public offices and financial institutions observed a full holiday.

The city-wide observance was inaugurated in the morning with annual Armistice Day chapel services at the O. S. and S. O. Home at 10:30 o'clock, attended by Legionnaires, members of Company L and many visitors. Dr. B. R. McClellan, chaplain of Foody Post, American Legion, gave the invocation, and Paul Fuller, commander of the post, read the Legion constitution.

At 11 o'clock the firing of a cannon signified the beginning of a two-minute period of silence, marking the exact day of the month when the Armistice terminated the end twelve years ago of the greatest conflict of all time. This silent period was generally observed also throughout Xenia and the nation. Booming of the cannon also marked the close of the two-minute period of silence. Taps sounded by buglers closed the service.

THE SURE-FIRE WINTER GASOLENE KOOLMOTOR

Vaporizes quickly—ignites promptly—leaves no harmful GUM to stick your valves...

No matter how cold, you can always depend on KOOLMOTOR—the original high test anti-knock green gasoline—for a quick, "sure-fire" start.

As soon as you touch your starter KOOLMOTOR vaporizes quickly, ignites promptly. In addition, it leaves no harmful, clogging gum that sticks your valves. Sticky, gummy valves are one of the important causes of delayed winter starting.

Here is another point to remember when choosing your winter gasoline: KOOLMOTOR gives quick winter starting without loss of mileage and without sacrificing any other feature of gasoline performance, such as pick-up, power, anti-knock, etc.

KOOLMOTOR gives quick starting plus—plus everything a thoroughbred gasoline should give.

MISS McDONNELL IS HONORED TUESDAY

Miss Eleanor McDonnell, winner of the southern Ohio Atwater Kent radio audition last year and winner of second place this year, was honored at a party given by the Catholic Ladies of Columbia, of which she is a member, at the home of Mrs. W. P. McKay, W. Main St., Tuesday evening.

Eight tables of "500" were in play during the evening and high score prizes were awarded. Mrs. James Leach, Mrs. John Bruce, Mrs. George Ernst and Mrs. William Saunders, Mrs. Clarence Herr and Mrs. John O'Connor were presented consolation prizes. Mrs. Joseph King, president of the council, presented Miss McDonnell with a large bouquet of yellow and white chrysanthemums. During the evening Miss McDonnell sang several numbers accompanied at the piano by her sister, Miss Mary McDonnell. Late in the evening a delicious refreshment course was served by Mrs. McKay.

BRIDE-ELECT IS HONORED MONDAY

Miss Dorothy Whitmer, Cincinnati, formerly of this city, whose marriage to Mr. Carl Weidinger, Newport, Ky., will take place the latter part of this month, was honored at a miscellaneous "show" given by Mrs. John R. Beacham, at her home on Hill St., Monday afternoon.

Mrs. C. R. Stearns entertained the thirty guests to two readings during the afternoon. Miss Whitmer was presented a lovely array of gifts. Later a luncheon course was served by Mrs. Beacham. Guests were seated at small tables arranged throughout the rooms of the Beacham home. Each table was centered with a bouquet of yellow button chrysanthemums and large bouquets of the same flowers were used in the decorations of the dining room.

CLASS IN RECANING HELD MONDAY AFTERNOON

The first lesson in recaning was given to fifteen women of Greene County Monday afternoon at the civil service room in the Post Office Bldg. Miss Ruth Radford, home demonstration agent, was in charge of the meeting at which much enthusiasm was shown.

Those present were: Mrs. R. L. Gowdy, Mrs. H. E. Faulkner, Mrs. Harry Ater, Mrs. Frances Hawker, Mrs. I. M. Coy, Mrs. Fred Penne-wit, Mrs. Edwin Fair, Miss Myrtle Barnett, Mrs. William Weiss, Mrs. Lawrence Manor, Mrs. W. A. McCall, Mrs. E. E. Harner, Mrs. Hattie Harner, Mrs. Elton Haines and Mrs. R. K. Haines.

INVITATIONS ISSUED FOR COMING WEDDINGS

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Bickett, east of Xenia, have issued invitations to a few relatives and friends to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Myrtle Elizabeth Bickett to Mr. John H. Peterson, which is to take place at the Bickett home, November 26, at noon.

Miss Bickett is a graduate of Central High School and Muskingum College, New Concord, O. She has taught for several years in the Caesar Creek High School. Mr. Peterson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Peterson, near New Burlington, and is engaged in farming in that vicinity.

L. T. L. MEMBERS HOLD MEETING HERE

Twelve members of the First L. T. L. met at the home of Eleanor Fawcett, 119 Fayette St., Saturday afternoon. All present brought donations for needy families. Owing to the number of L. T. L.'s in the city it was decided at this meeting to name this unit, "The Busy Bees." It was also decided that members will make scrap-books.

After the business meeting light refreshments were served and games were played.

GIRL SCOUTS TO SPONSOR BANQUET

Girl Scouts of the city are sponsoring a "mother and dad" banquet in the cafeteria at Central High School Friday evening at 6 o'clock. Following the dinner a short program will be presented by the Girl Scouts and awards will be presented.

A large number of reservations have already been made and any one desiring tickets for the banquet may obtain them from Mrs. Elizabeth Anderson, Probate Court office, in the Court House.

YOUNG PEOPLE TO GIVE DANCE

The young people of St. Bridget Church will sponsor a dance to be given Thursday evening from 8 until 12 o'clock in the auditorium of St. Bridget School. Music will be furnished by a local orchestra.

The Ladies Aid Society of the First Presbyterian Church will meet at the home of Mrs. George Weiss, W. Market St., Friday for an all day meeting. Members will see during the day and are asked to bring all sewing necessities. A covered dish dinner will be served at noon. The committee in charge is composed of Mrs. Weiss, Mrs. Violet Gowdy, Mrs. O. A. Spahr and Mrs. Earl Short.

The second lesson in "Home Care of the Sick" for women of Xenia Twp., will be given by Mrs. William Nash at the assembly room in the court house Friday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. This is to be a centralized meeting for Xenia Twp. and leaders will not repeat the lesson later. Each woman in the township is urged to attend and women in Xenia city are invited to the meeting.

All members of Pride of Xenia Council, No. 140, D. of A., are asked to be present at the regular meeting Thursday evening. Business of importance will be transacted and a new degree team will be organized.

from 8 until 12 o'clock with music furnished by Michael Hauer and his orchestra, Dayton, often heard over Station WLW, Cincinnati. During the evening the orchestra staged several novelty numbers.

Success of the affair was due to the efforts of Mr. Harry Williams, general chairman of the dance, assisted by the following persons: Miss Dorothy Devoe, of Alpha Theta Chapter, Delta Theta Tau Sorority; Mr. John G. Baldwin of the Rotary Club; Messrs. Lou McCoy and Glenn F. McFadden of the Phi Delta Kappa Fraternity and Mr. Kenneth Elliott.

Members of A. C. Turrell W. C. T. U., will meet Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of Mrs. W. W. Foust, 17 W. Church St. A play will be given by the Loyal Temperance Legion and reports of the state convention in Youngstown will also be given. Business of importance will be brought before the members and a large attendance is desired at the meeting.

Mrs. Burt Weir, Mt. Vernon, O., who came here to take part in the special "Choir Day" services at the First Baptist Church Sunday morning, spent the week-end with her mother, Mrs. Minnie Dill, W. Second St., and her uncle, Mr. Samuel Kiehl, Dayton. Mrs. Weir returned home Wednesday.

The J. F. F. Club will meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Toms, E. Second St., Friday evening. All members of the club are invited to attend.

Mr. Howard Donley, S. Detroit St., underwent an operation Tuesday morning at Miami Valley Hospital, Dayton. He is reported to be recovering nicely.

The First Presbyterian Church Council will meet Wednesday evening following the regular weekly prayer meeting. Prayer services will begin at 7:30 o'clock and the council meeting will begin about 8:15 o'clock.

The W. H. O. Sunday School Class of the United Brethren Church will meet at the church dormitory Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock. All members are urged to attend the meeting.

Mrs. Annie B. French, Martinsburg, W. Va., is visiting her sister and family, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Jenkins, north of Xenia on the Ludlow Road.

DEATH CLAIMS MISS BELLE GATCH, AFTER LONG ILLNESS HERE

Miss Mary Belle Gatch, life-long resident of Xenia, died Wednesday morning at 6:15 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Ann Collett, 532 S. Detroit St. Miss Gatch fell at her home, 119 N. Detroit St., last February and received a fracture of the left hip. She was a patient at Espey Hospital for several months and was removed to the home of Mrs. Collett, May 1. She had recovered from the injury to her hip when she contracted pneumonia last week and suffered a stroke of paralysis Monday morning which was the direct cause of death.

Miss Gatch was born in Xenia and spent her entire life here, where she was identified with many of the city's literary activities. She was the daughter of Moses D. and Mary Jones Gatch, formerly of Hillsboro. Her father practiced law in Xenia for forty years and served both the county and district in the state legislature. It was he who cast the deciding vote at the closing session of the legislature in 1870 making the O. S. and S. O. Home a state institution.

Miss Gatch was a graduate of the old Xenia Female College. She was a descendant from pioneers in Methodism in Maryland and Virginia and was a member of Trinity M. E. Church from early childhood. She was a charter member of the Xenia Library Association, now the Greene County District Library, which work she loved. She was also a member of Catharine Greene Chapter, D. A. R.

Funeral services will be held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Trinity M. E. Church, with interment in Woodland Cemetery. Friends may call at the Collett home Thursday evening from 5 until 9 o'clock.

WILL CONTEST SUI ASSIGNED HERE FOR TRIAL WEDNESDAY

Jury trial of a suit contesting the validity of the alleged last will of the late Lester Croy, who died April 14, 1929, has been assigned for Wednesday November 19 in Common Pleas Court, Judge R. L. Gowdy announces.

The action was brought by Sarah J. Ferrell, as guardian of Mary Jane Croy and Martha Elizabeth Croy, minors, against Carrie Croy, as an individual and as administratrix of the estate of the deceased, with the Home Building and Savings Co., named as co-defendant.

According to the petition, the decedent was the grandfather of the plaintiff's wards, his only heirs, and the defendant is his widow. The widow was named sole legatee of the estate in a document purporting to be the last will, which was duly probated, the plaintiff asserts, claiming this was not actually the valid will.

The personal estate of the decedent consists of several thousand dollars on deposit in the Home Building and Savings Co., and the defendant, under a temporary restraining order, is prevented from withdrawing any of the funds on deposit pending settlement of the litigation.

MUSIC TEACHER ON SCHOOL STAFF

CARL FRANCE

Carl France, Dayton, with twenty-five years experience as a music teacher, has been added to the teaching staff of the Xenia public school system in the capacity of instructor of drums and wind instruments. Mr. France will give private lessons to students one day each week.

The new music teacher has operated a private studio in Dayton since 1919, and has had a varied musical career. He has been the drummer of the Victory Theater Orchestra in Dayton ever since 1916, plays the oboe in the Civic Music League in that city and in addition has also played the saxophone and oboe with John Lytle's Concert Band in Dayton.

Mr. France is director of the fireman's band in Dayton and at present is continuing his study of music as a student of the Wittenberg School of Music at Springfield. He began his musical career at Fort Wayne, Ind.

To Celebrate Anniversary

Commemorating the thirty-fourth birthday anniversary of their organization, members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First Lutheran Church will hold a special anniversary meeting and dinner-party in the Sunday School rooms of the church, 303 W. Main St., Wednesday beginning at 4 p. m.

Mrs. F. F. Filson, president of the organization will preside. Hostesses for the dinner at 6:30, to which husbands of members are invited are Mrs. Theron White, Mrs. C. F. Mellage, and Mrs. Kenneth Witham.

The Lutheran Ladies Aid Society was organized at the home of Mrs. Minnie Davis when she lived on Rogers St., on the first Thursday in November, 1896. Twelve members were included in the charter roll and two are still active members. They are: Mrs. Minnie Davis and Mrs. John Witham. Records show that the late Mrs. George Engle was the first president of the society while Mrs. Davis served as its first secretary and treasurer. For many years the group only had these two officers. The carefully kept diary of the organization indicates that the Rev. Frank Delo, now of Tiro, O., was pastor during the time that the society was first fostered. Meetings were held in the various homes of the members on the first Thursday of each month. Membership dues then were five cents per member per month.

The Aid Society was organized for the purpose of Christian fellowship among women of the congregation and to help defray the current expenses of the congregation. The latter was accomplished through the efforts of sewing carpets, quilting, and doing miscellaneous sewing for busy housewives at a nominal charge.

Later the idea of serving suppers claimed the attention of the society, and an oyster dinner was the first project of that idea. Now the women serve chicken suppers at the church once each month except during the summer. Household helps, especially kitchen aids, and various dessert delicacies together with the monthly dues aid the treasury in taking care of its obligations.

Both Mrs. Witham and Mrs. Davis have held offices in the organization, the latter being vice-president at present. Other officers during the present church year of the Lutheran Aid Society include: Mrs. Edward Nichols, secretary; Mrs. H. K. Snyder, treasurer; Mrs. Lewis Urshell, financial secretary, and Mrs. C. F. Mellage birthday secretary.

The present membership roll includes: Mrs. John Witham, Mrs. Sara Sheets, Mrs. Minnie Davis, Mrs. Julius Moller, Mrs. Edward Nichols, Mrs. J. W. Kennedy, Mrs. William Bone, Mrs. H. M. Fudge, Mrs. F. F. Filson, Mrs. George Hertzberger, Mrs. C. Holton, Mrs. Jole Kohl, Mrs. C. F. Mellage, Mrs. Harold Pennington, Mrs. Fred Randall, Mrs. H. K. Snyder, Mrs. Joseph Schardt, Mrs. Lewis Urshell, Mrs. Theron White, Mrs. Kenneth Witham, Mrs. Lucia Garrison, Mrs. George Fudge, Mrs. Walter P. Maxwell, Mrs. George Holstein, and Mrs. Walter Owens.

STATE IS BLAMED

Claim made by John A. Middleton for compensation by virtue of a stroke of facial paralysis suffered while in the employ of the county on a road macadamizing project April 9, 1929, was twice disallowed by the state industrial commission and not by County Commissioners. A jury in Common Pleas Court Monday upheld Middleton's right to participate in the state insurance fund by reason of his disability.

EAST END NEWS

The spiritualist Branch, 1017 E. Main St., will render a program at Yellow Springs Thursday evening at 7:30. Regular services of the Xenia Branch will be Friday night and Sunday as usual, E. Main St.

FATHER OF XENIAN DIES OF INJURIES EARLY WEDNESDAY

Injuries which he received when his automobile was struck by a Big Four passenger train near Middletown Monday morning proved fatal to F. G. Hopper, 63, Defiance, O., father of Leland G. Hopper, 124 W. Church St., this city. He died in the Middletown Hospital Wednesday morning at 12:30 o'clock.

Mr. Hopper was crushed about the head and chest and his condition was considered critical from the time of the accident. His wife, Sarah, was also injured but was reported to be recovering satisfactorily. She had not been told of her husband's death at noon Wednesday.

The accident occurred when Mr. and Mrs. Hopper were returning to their home in Defiance after spending the week end with their daughter, Miss Margaret Hopper, student at Western College for Women, Oxford, O. Mr. Hopper drove his sedan on the tracks at Georgetown Crossing, five miles southeast of Middletown, directly in the path of the train. Mr. and Mrs. Hopper were thrown out of the car, which was thrown 250 feet.

Besides his widow, Mr. Hopper is survived by his daughter, Margaret, and three sons, Leland G., manager of the F. W. Uhlman store, this city; a son in New York, and another son in Port Wayne, Ind. The body was to be removed to the home in Defiance Wednesday and funeral services will be held there Friday, with burial in Bowling Green, O.

TRINITY CHURCH TO HOLD SIXTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY RITES

Trinity M. E. Church, E. Main St., will observe its sixty-fifth anniversary Sunday and appropriate home-coming services are being planned to take place on that day. The Rev. A. H. Beardsley is pastor of the church.

In the morning the regular Sunday School services will be held at 9:15 o'clock, in charge of the superintendent, A. A. Conklin. Church services will be held at 10:30 o'clock with the sermon to be delivered by the Rev. Mr. Beardsley. In the afternoon at 2 o'clock a get-together meeting will be held at which George C. Stokes will be chairman. Short talks will be held at which George C. Stokes will be chairman. Short talks will be delivered by former members and letters will be read from former members unable to attend.

Dr. V. F. Brown, Dayton, former pastor of the church but now retired, will preach at union services at the church at 7:30 p. m.

The present church was dedicated in October, 1865, after a building committee had been appointed in 1862 and the contract let on March 21, 1864. The church observed its thirty-fifth anniversary September 3, 1900, when the Rev. M. E. Ketcham was pastor. Extensive improvements were made to the church in 1911 and 1912. The Rev. H. J. Jewett was pastor of the church when it observed its fiftieth anniversary on October 3, 1915. It is hoped that a large attendance will be present at the home coming services Sunday.

FACULTY OF CHURCH SCHOOL WILL MEET

The Rev. A. H. Beardsley, pastor of Trinity M. E. Church and general chairman of the Standard Training School for Sunday School teachers and workers, will meet with Carl Benner, dean of the school, Miss Helen Nichols, registrar and the committee on promotion at his home on E. Main St. Wednesday evening at 6:30 o'clock to formulate plans concerning the details of the school to be held here next week from Monday until Friday. Members of the promotion committee are: the Rev. W. H. Tifford, J. J. Stout and H. E. Eichman.

"The four courses," according to the Rev. Mr. Beardsley, "offer a choice of the fundamental subjects which every Sunday School worker needs." The four courses will be taught by Prof. E. E. Plack, Prof. C. E. Ashcraft, Prof. A. J. Hostetler and Miss Dorothy LaCroix.

A PROTEST

Xenia, O., Nov. 12, 1930
To the Editor of the Xenia Gazette
Dear Sir:

With the knowledge of your fairness on all questions submitted to you in the past, we beg of you to give the following space in your valuable paper.

Thirteen years ago, in pursuance of the declaration of war by the congress of the U. S. there marched away from Greene County amidst the applause and cheers of "good-bye" and "God bless you", the county's quota of Negro boys for Camp Sherman to be trained to play their parts in the great drama of war. How well they played their parts histories will tell. Along the battle front in foreign lands they fought shoulder to shoulder with their white buddies. They needed us then. Now, twelve years after this conflict is over, we are not buddies—not even considered patriotic citizens. While others are commemorating those that have gone before, we are made to stand back on the side lines, forgotten. We ask ourselves, was there sincerity in the goodbyes of 1917 and would it have been the same if Armistice Day had been held prior to November 4.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

WOMAN EXONERATED RESULT OF INQUEST INTO DEATH OF BOY

Mrs. Lydia Williams, Washington C. H., driver of the auto which fatally injured 3-year-old Ralph Chandler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Chandler, in front of the Chandler residence a mile east of Jamestown October 26, was exonerated of blame for the death by Coroner R. L. Haines, Jamestown, who returned a verdict of "accidental death" following an inquest Tuesday morning in the office of Miss Elsie Canby, court stenographer at the Court House.

Twelve witnesses testified at the inquiry and from the evidence presented Coroner Haines decided the accident was unavoidable.

The lad was run down as he attempted to cross the road to reach his baby brother, whom he believed to be in danger. The boy saw an elephant, camel and a donkey, chained together, approaching along the pike led by a trainer, and feared for the safety of his baby brother.

One of the witnesses who testified at the inquest was Chief Deertoot, an Iroquois Indian, keeper of the animals which indirectly caused the accident. The animals belonged to a small circus occupying winter quarters near Dayton and were being returned from a pumpkin show at Circleville.

FOUR CANDIDATES REVEAL EXPENSES

Campaign expense statements of four successful Republican candidates for local offices at the November 4 election have been filed with the board of elections, where as all candidates are required to file their expense accounts within ten days after the election. Dr. R. L. Haines, Jamestown, corner, elect; C. A. Jacobs, Dayton Pike, county commissioner-elect and Paul H. Creswell, county auditor-elect, received no donations and listed no expenditures, while Leroy Wolf, recorder-elect, spent $3.75 and received no contributions.

American Legion, gave an interesting speech on the war and its results. He explained many of the horrors of war and the cost that came of it. He pointed out that Russia to-day, advocates a world revolution in the near future. He also pointed out the fact that if one-half of the money spent during the war had been used to stop it before it began the war might have been avoided. He spoke of the necessity of national defense and its advantages. Mr. Creswell said that every sane man should be a pacifist.

Mr. Creswell introduced the last speaker of the afternoon, Wilson Galloway, who is an alumnus of Central and who now resides in Cedarville. Mr. Galloway said that one does not realize what meaning there is in the several monuments that are erected in the United States. Several of the nations are still hearing "The shot heard around the world" and are now beginning to come to their own. He said that Soviet Russia was the last to enter the fold. He explained the cause of the Armistice and who took part in the starting of it. He told how a conservative weak person or nation may overcome a strong person or nation. He told how some nations were great and ruled supreme

One of the best auditorium programs ever held in Central High School was enjoyed by the students and faculty. The program was an Armistice Day program with World War veterans taking part and explaining war facts to the students. The program was opened with acting Principal B. F. Cranor in charge. Dr. B. R. McClellan presented the opening prayer which was the prayer given in all parts of the United States by the American Legion for the Armistice Day programs. Mr. Miller then led the group in two songs "Pack Up Your Troubles" and "Over There." The eighth grade students gave the American Creed following which Mr. Cranor introduced Paul Creswell as one of the speakers of the afternoon.

Mr. Creswell, a member of the when taking in a small territory but when they enlarge on this territory their power is not nearly as great and they fall before the charge of a smaller nation. One of the great changes in the war came when the Prussian war machine "went up" said Mr. Galloway.

Two verses of America were sung and the flag salute was given followed by "America The Beautiful."

A faculty committee composed of Miss Haynes, Miss Schweibold, and Mr. Miller was responsible for the fine program arranged for the occasion.

BRIDE-ELECT IS HONORED MONDAY

Miss Dorothy Whitmer, Cincinnati, formerly of this city, whose marriage to Mr. Carl Weidinger, Newport, Ky., will take place the latter part of this month, was honored at a miscellaneous "show" given by Mrs. John R. Beacham at her home on Hill St., Monday afternoon.

Mrs. C. R. Stearns entertained the thirty guests with two readings during the afternoon. Miss Whitmer was presented a lovely array of gifts. Later a luncheon course was served by Mrs. Beacham. Guests were seated at small tables arranged throughout the rooms of the Beacham home. Each table was centered with a bouquet of yellow and white chrysanthemums and large bouquets of the same flowers were used in the decorations of the dining room.

CLASS IN RECAUING HELD MONDAY AFTERNOON

The first lesson in recauing was given to fifteen women of Greene County Monday afternoon at the civil service room in the Post Office Bldg. Miss Ruth Radford, home demonstration agent, was in charge of the meeting at which much enthusiasm was shown.

Those present were: Mrs. R. L. Gowdy, Mrs. H. E. Paulkner, Mrs. Harry Ater, Mrs. Charles Hawker, Mrs. I. M. Coy, Mrs. Fred Penner, Mrs. Edwin Fair, Miss Myrtle Barnett, Mrs. William Weiss, Mrs. Lawrence Manor, Mrs. W. A. McCall, Mrs. H. E. Harner, Mrs. H. Harner, Mrs. Elton Haines and Mrs. R. K. Haines.

INVITATIONS ISSUED FOR COMING WEDNESDAY

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Bickett, east of Xenia, have issued invitations to a few relatives and friends to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Myrtle Elizabeth Bickett to Mr. John H. Peterson, which is to take place at the Bickett home, November 26, at noon.

Miss Bickett is a graduate of Central High School and Muskingum College, New Concord, O. She has taught for several years in the Caesars Creek High School. Mr. Peterson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Peterson, near New Burlington, and is engaged in farming in that vicinity.

L. T. L. MEMBERS HOLD MEETING HERE

Twelve members of the First L. T. L. met at the home of Eleanor Fawcett, 119 Fayette St., Saturday afternoon. All present brought donations for needy families. Owing to the number of L. T. L.'s in the city it was decided at this meeting to name this unit, "The Busy Bees." It was also decided that members will make scrapbooks.

After the business meeting light refreshments were served and games were played.

GIRL SCOUTS TO SPONSOR BANQUET

Girl Scouts of the city are sponsoring a "mother and dad" banquet in the cafeteria at Central High School Friday evening at 6 o'clock. Following the dinner a short program will be presented by the Girl Scouts and awards will be presented.

A large number of reservations have already been made and any one desiring tickets for the banquet may obtain them from Mrs. Elizabeth Anderson, Probate Court office, in the Court House.

YOUNG PEOPLE TO GIVE DANCE

The young people of St. Brigid Church will sponsor a dance to be given Tuesday evening from 8 until 12 o'clock in the auditorium of St. Brigid School. Music will be furnished by a local orchestra.

The Ladies Aid Society of the First Presbyterian Church will meet at the home of Mrs. George Weiss, W. Market St., Friday for an all day meeting. Members will sew during the day and are asked to bring all sewing necessities. A covered dish dinner will be served at noon. The committee in charge is composed of Mrs. Weiss, Mrs. Violet Gowdy, Mrs. O. A. Spahr and Mrs. Earl Short.

The second lesson in "Home Care of the Sick" for women of Xenia Twp., will be given by Mrs. William Nash at the assembly room in the court house Friday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. This is to be a centralized meeting for Xenia Twp. and leaders will not repeat the lesson later. Each woman in the township is urged to attend and women in Xenia city are invited to the meeting.

All members of Pride of Xenia Council, No. 140, D. of A., are asked to be present at the regular meeting Thursday evening. Business of importance will be transacted and a new degree team will be organized.

from 8 until 12 o'clock with music furnished by Michael Hauer and his orchestra, Dayton, often heard over Station WLW, Cincinnati. During the evening the orchestra staged several novelty numbers.

Success of the affair was due to the efforts of Mr. Harry Williams, general chairman of the dance, assisted by the following persons: Miss Dorothy Devoe, of Alpha Theta Chapter, Delta Theta Tau Sorority; Mr. John G. Baldwin of the Rotary Club; Messrs. Lou McCoy and Glenn F. McFadden of the Phi Delta Kappa Fraternity and Mr. Kenneth Elliott.

Members of A. C. Turrell W. C. T. U. will meet Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of Mrs. W. W. Foust, 17 W. Church St. A play will be given by the Loyal Temperance Legion and reports of the state convention in Youngstown will also be given. Business of importance will be brought before the members and a large attendance is desired at the meeting.

Mrs. Burt Weir, Mt. Vernon, O., who came here to take part in the special "Choir Day" services at the First Baptist Church Sunday morning, spent the week-end with her mother, Mrs. Minnie Dill, W. Second St., and her uncle, Mr. Samuel Kiehl, Dayton. Mrs. Weir returned home Wednesday.

The J. F. F. Club will meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Toms, E. Second St., Friday evening. All members of the club are invited to attend.

Mr. Howard Donley, S. Detroit St., underwent an operation Tuesday morning at Miami Valley Hospital, Dayton. He is reported to be recovering nicely.

The First Presbyterian Church Council will meet Wednesday evening following the regular weekly prayer meeting. Prayer services will begin at 7:30 o'clock and the council meeting will begin about 8:15 o'clock.

The W. H. O. Sunday School Class of the United Brethren Church will meet at the church dormitory Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock. All members are urged to attend the meeting.

Mrs. Annie B. French, Martinsburg, W. Va., is visiting her sister and family, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Jenkins, north of Xenia on the Ludlow Road.

DEATH CLAIMS MISS BELLE GATCH, AFTER LONG ILLNESS HERE

Miss Mary Belle Gatch, life-long resident of Xenia, died Wednesday morning at 6:15 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Ann Collett, 532 S. Detroit St. Miss Gatch fell at her home, 119 N. Detroit St., last Tuesday and received a fracture of the left hip. She was a patient at Espey Hospital for several months and was removed to the home of Mrs. Collett, May 1. She had recovered from the injury to her hip when she contracted pneumonia last week and suffered a stroke of paralysis Monday morning which was the direct cause of death.

Miss Gatch was born in Xenia and spent her entire life here, where she was identified with many of the city's literary activities. She was the daughter of Moses D. and Mary Jones Gatch, formerly of Hillsboro. Her father practiced law in Xenia for forty years and served both the county and district in the state legislature. It was he who cast the deciding vote at the closing session of the legislature in 1870 making the O. S. and S. V. Home a state institution.

Miss Gatch was a graduate of the old Xenia Female College. She was a descendant from pioneers in Methodism in Maryland and Virginia and was a member of Trinity M. E. Church from early childhood. She was a charter member of the Xenia Library Association, now the Greene County District Library, which work she loved. She was also a member of Catharine Greene Chapter, D. A. R.

Funeral services will be held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Trinity M. E. Church, with interment in Woodland Cemetery. Friends may call at the Collett home Thursday evening from 5 until 9 o'clock.

WILL CONTEST SUIT ASSIGNED HERE FOR TRIAL WEDNESDAY

Jury trial of a suit contesting the validity of the alleged last will of the late Lester Croly, who died April 14, 1929, has been assigned for Wednesday November 19 in Common Pleas Court, Judge R. L. Gowdy announces.

The action was brought by Sarah J. Ferrell, as guardian of Mary Jane Croly and Martha Elizabeth Croly, minors, against Carrie Croly, as an individual and as administratrix of the estate of the decedent, with the Home Building and Savings Co., named as co-defendant.

According to the petition, the decedent was the grandfather of the plaintiffs' ward, his only heir, and the defendant is his widow. The widow was named sole legatee of the estate in a document purporting to be the last will, which was duly probated, the plaintiff asserts, claiming this was not actually the valid will.

The personal estate of the decedent consists of several thousand dollars on deposit in the Home Building and Savings Co., and the defendant, under a temporary restraining order, is prevented from withdrawing any of the funds on deposit pending settlement of the litigation.

MUSIC TEACHER ON SCHOOL STAFF

CARL FRANCE

Carl France, Dayton, with twenty-five years experience as a music teacher, has been added to the teaching staff of the Xenia public school system in the capacity of instructor of drums and wind instruments. Mr. France will give private lessons to students one day each week.

The new music teacher has operated a private studio in Dayton since 1919, and has had a varied musical career. He has been the drummer of the Victory Theater Orchestra in Dayton ever since 1916, plays the oboe in the Civic Music League in that city and in addition has also played the saxophone and oboe with John Lytle's Concert Band in Dayton.

Mr. France is director of the fireman's band in Dayton and at present is continuing his study of music as a student of the Wittenberg School of Music at Springfield. He began his musical career at Fort Wayne, Ind.

To Celebrate Anniversary

Commemorating the thirty-fourth birthday anniversary of their organization, members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First Lutheran Church will hold a special anniversary meeting and dinner-party in the Sunday School rooms of the church, 303 W. Main St., Wednesday beginning at 4 p. m.

Mrs. F. F. Filson, president of the organization will preside. Hostesses for the dinner at 6:30, to which husbands or members are invited are Mrs. Theron White, Mrs. C. F. Mellage, and Mrs. Kenneth Witham.

The Lutheran Ladies Aid Society was organized at the home of Mrs. Minnie Davis when she lived on Rogers St., on the first Thursday in November, 1896. Twelve members were included in the charter roll and two are still active members. They are: Mrs. Minnie Davis and Mrs. John Witham.

Records show that the late Mrs. George Engle was the first president of the society while Mrs. Davis served as its first secretary and treasurer. For many years the group only had these two officers. The carefully kept diary of the organization indicates that the Rev. Frank Delo, now of Tiro, O., was pastor during the time that the society was first fostered. Meetings were held in the various homes of the members on the first Thursday of each month. Membership dues then were five cents per member per month.

The Aid Society was organized for the purpose of Christian fellowship among women of the congregation and to help defer the current expenses of the congregation. The latter was accomplished through the efforts of sewing carter, ragging, quilting, and doing miscellaneous sewing for busy housewives at a nominal charge.

Later the idea of serving suppers claimed the attention of the society, and an oyster dinner was the first project of that idea. Now the women serve chicken suppers at the church once each month except during the summer. Household helps, especially kitchen aids, and various dessert delicacies aid the treasury in taking care of its obligations.

Both Mrs. Witham and Mrs. Davis have held offices in the organization, the latter being vice-president at present. Other officers during the present church year of the Lutheran Ladies Aid Society include: Mrs. Edward Nichols, secretary; Mrs. H. K. Snyder, treasurer; Mrs. Lewis Urshell, financial secretary, and Mrs. C. F. Mellage birthday secretary.

The present membership roll includes: Mrs. John Witham, Mrs. Sara Sheets, Mrs. Minnie Davis, Mrs. Julius Molitor, Mrs. Edward Nichols, Mrs. J. W. Kennedy, Mrs. William Bone, Mrs. H. M. Fudge, Mrs. F. F. Filson, Mrs. George Hertzberger, Mrs. C. Holton, Mrs. John Kohl, Mrs. C. F. Mellage, Mrs. Harold Pennington, Mrs. Fred Randall, Mrs. H. K. Snyder, Mrs. Joseph Schardt, Mrs. Lewis Urshell, Mrs. Theron White, Mrs. Kenneth Witham, Mrs. Lucia Garrison, Mrs. George Fudge, Mrs. Walter P. Maxwell, Mrs. George Holstein, and Mrs. Walter Owens.

STATE IS BLAMED

Claim made by John A. Middleton for compensation by virtue of a stroke of facial paralysis suffered while in the employ of the county on a road macadamizing project April 9, 1929, was twice disallowed by the state industrial commission and not by County Commissioners. A jury in Common Pleas Court Monday upheld Middleton's right to participate in the state insurance fund by reason of his disability.

EAST END NEWS

The spiritualist Branch, 1017 E. Main St. will render a program at Yellow Springs Thursday evening at 7:30. Regular services of the Xenia Branch will be Friday night and Sunday as usual, E. Main St.

FATHER OF XENIAN DIES OF INJURIES EARLY WEDNESDAY

Injuries which he received when his automobile was struck by a Big Four passenger train near Middletown Monday morning proved fatal to F. G. Hopper, 63, Defiance, O., father of Leland G. Hopper, 124 W. Church St., this city. He died in the Middletown Hospital Wednesday morning at 12:30 o'clock.

Mr. Hopper was crushed about the head and chest and his condition was considered critical from the time of the accident. His wife, Sarah, was also injured but was reported to be recovering satisfactorily. She had not been told of her husband's death at noon Wednesday.

The accident occurred when Mr. and Mrs. Hopper were returning to their home in Defiance after spending the week-end with their daughter, Miss Margaret Hopper, student at Western College for Women, Oxford, O. Mr. Hopper drove his sedan onto the tracks at Georgetown Crossing, five miles southeast of Middletown, directly in the path of the train. Mr. and Mrs. Hopper were thrown out of the car, which was thrown 250 feet.

Besides his widow, Mr. Hopper is survived by his daughter, Margaret; and three sons, Leland G., manager of the F. W. Uhlman store, this city; a son in New York and another son in Port Wayne, Ind. The body was to be removed to the home in Defiance Wednesday and funeral services will be held there Friday, with burial in Bowling Green, O.

TRINITY CHURCH TO HOLD SIXTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY RITES

Trinity M. E. Church, E. Main St., will observe its sixty-fifth anniversary Sunday and appropriate home-coming services are being planned to take place on that day. The Rev. A. H. Beardsley is pastor of the church.

In the morning the regular Sunday School services will be held at 9:15 o'clock, in charge of the superintendent, A. A. Conklin. Church services will be held at 10:30 o'clock with the sermon to be delivered by the Rev. Mr. Beardsley. In the afternoon at 2 o'clock a get-together meeting will be held at which George C. Stokes will be chairman. Short talks will be delivered by former members and letters will be read from former members unable to attend.

Dr. V. F. Brown, Dayton, former pastor of the church but now retired, will preach at union services at the church at 7:30 p. m.

The present church was dedicated in October, 1865, after a building committee had been appointed in 1862 and the contract let on March 21, 1864. The church observed its thirty-fifth anniversary September 2, 1900, when the Rev. M. E. Ketcham was pastor. Extensive improvements were made to the church in 1911 and 1912. The Rev. H. J. Jewett was pastor of the church when it observed its fifteenth anniversary on October 3, 1915. It is hoped that a large attendance will be present at the home coming services Sunday.

FACULTY OF CHURCH SCHOOL WILL MEET

The Rev. A. H. Beardsley, pastor of Trinity M. E. Church and general chairman of the Standard Training School for Sunday School teachers and workers, will meet with Carl Benner, dean of the school, Miss Helen Nichols, registrar and the committee on promotion at his home on E. Main St. Wednesday evening at 6:30 o'clock to formulate plans concerning the details of the school to be held here next week from Monday until Friday. Members of the promotion committee are: the Rev. W. H. Tilford, J. J. Stout and H. E. Eichman.

"The four courses," according to the Rev. Mr. Beardsley, "offer a choice of the fundamental subjects which every Sunday School worker needs." The four courses will be taught by Prof. E. E. Flack, Prof. C. E. Ashcraft, Prof. A. J. Hostetler and Miss Dorothy LaCroix.

A PROTEST

Xenia, O., Nov. 12, 1930 To the Editor of the Xenia Gazette Dear Sir:

With the knowledge of your fairness on all questions submitted to you in the past, we beg of you to give the following space in your valuable paper.

Thirteen years ago, in pursuance of the declaration of war by the congress of the U. S. there marched away from Greene County amidst the applause and cheers of "good-bye" and "God bless you", the county's quota of Negro boys for Camp Sherman to be trained to play their parts in the great drama of war. How well they played their parts histories will tell. Along the battle fronts in foreign lands they fought shoulder to shoulder with their white buddies. They needed us then. Now, twelve years after this conflict is over, we are not buddies—not even considered patriotic citizens. While others are commemorating those that have gone before, we are made to stand back on the side lines, forgotten.

We ask ourselves, was there sincerity in the goodbyes of 1917 and would it have been the same if Armistice Day had been held prior to November 4.

John Roan Post, American Legion, Harry Bass, Sec.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

In memory of the armistice, that momentous occasion which took place twelve years ago, an assembly of the entire junior and senior high schools of Central was held at 1:00 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in the Jean B. Elwell Auditorium.

One of the best auditorium programs ever held in Central High School was enjoyed by the students and faculty. The program was an Armistice Day program with World War veterans taking part and explaining war facts to the students.

The program was opened with acting Principal B. F. Cranor in charge. Dr. B. R. McClellan presented the opening prayer which was the prayer given in all parts of the United States by the American Legion for the Armistice Day programs. Mr. Miller then led the group in two songs "Pack Up Your Troubles" and "Over There." The eighth grade students gave the American Creed following which Mr. Cranor introduced Paul Creswell as one of the speakers of the afternoon.

WOMAN EXONERATED RESULT OF INQUEST INTO DEATH OF BOY

Mrs. Lydia Williams, Washington C. H., driver of the auto which fatally injured 3-year-old Ralph Chandler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Chandler, in front of the Chandler residence a mile east of Jamestown October 26, was exonerated of blame for the death by Coroner R. L. Haines, Jamestown, who returned a verdict of "accidental death" following an inquest Tuesday morning in the office of Miss Elsie Canby, court stenographer at the Court House.

Twelve witnesses testified at the inquiry and from the evidence presented Coroner Haines decided the accident was unavoidable.

The lad was run down as he attempted to cross the road to reach his baby brother, whom he believed to be in danger. The boy saw an elephant, camel, and a donkey, chained together, approaching along the pike led by a trainer, and feared for the safety of his baby brother.

One of the witnesses who testified at the inquest was Chief Deertoot, an Iroquois Indian, keeper of the animals which indirectly caused the accident. The animals belonged to a small circus occupying winter quarters near Dayton and were being returned from a pumpkin show at Circleville.

FOUR CANDIDATES REVEAL EXPENSES

Campaign expense statements of four successful Republican candidates for local offices at the November 4 election have been filed with the board of elections, where as all candidates are required to file their expense accounts within ten days after the election. Dr. R. L. Haines, Jamestown, coroner, elect; C. A. Jacobs, Dayton Pike, county commissioner-elect and Paul H. Creswell, county auditor-elect, received no donations and listed no expenditures, while Leroy Wolf, recorder-elect, spent $3.75 and received no contributions.

No More Gas In Stomach and Bowels

American Legion, gave an interesting speech on the war and its results. He explained many of the horrors of war and the cost that came of it. He pointed out that Russia, today, advocates a world revolution in the near future. He also pointed out the fact that if one-half of the money spent during the war had been used to stop it before it began the war might have been avoided. He spoke of the necessity of national defense and its advantages. Mr. Creswell said that every sane man should be a pacifist.

Mr. Creswell introduced the last speaker of the afternoon, Wilson Galloway, who is an alumnus of Central and who now resides in Cedarville. Mr. Galloway said that one does not realize what meaning there is in the several monuments that are erected in the United States. Several of the nations are still hearing "The shot heard around the world" and are now beginning to come to their own. He said that Soviet Russia was the last to enter the fold. He explained the cause of the Armistice and who took part in the starting of it. He told how a conservative weak person or nation may overcome a strong person or nation. He told how some nations were great and ruled supreme when taking in a small territory but when they enlarge on this territory their power is not nearly as great and they fall before the charge of a smaller nation. One of the great changes in the war came when the Prussian war machine "went up" said Mr. Galloway.

Two verses of America were sung and the flag salute was given followed by "America The Beautiful."

A faculty committee composed of Miss Haynes, Miss Schweibold, and Mr. Miller was responsible for the fine program arranged for the occasion.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou has sent. I have glorified thee on the earth: I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do.—St. John, xvii, 3, 4.

GOOD MEMORY

Colonel Eddie Rickenbacker has a better memory than most of his countrymen if he did not have to look up the records to find out why he was summoned to Washington last week to receive a congressional medal for something he did 145 months ago. War's glories are fleeting. After all these years, Americans generally might be pardoned for thinking that congress was awarding the "ace of aces" of the American forces in the World War a medal for making automobiles, which is what this modern Cincinnati returned home to turn his hard to.

The act for which the medal presented to Colonel Rickenbacker last week was awarded, according to the citation, was performed in France in September, 1918. What conceivable excuse has there been for keeping the breast he gallantly exposed to enemy fire undecorated until a dozen years after the return of peace? Colonel Rickenbacker's case of deferred honor is by no means the most inexplicable that could be cited. Civil war veterans are still being handed honors they earned on the battlefield nearly 70 years ago.

An honor unduly deferred is like charity that comes too late. The years when the recipient might have been enjoying what he has earned are likely to breed resentment. A man who risks his life for his country doesn't like to be treated like a workman, whose pay is withheld for a week or a month lest he jump his job. The adage of better late than never is the refuge of procrastination, which could not show to poorer advantage than where merit is entitled to recognition.

FOLLOWING SUIT

Sir Philip Gibbs says that American writers of the most modern school "are intellectual bolsheviks proclaiming a contempt for the old moralities." We take it that by bolsheviks Sir Philip means iconoclasts. Albert Stern, associate of the National Academy of Design, states that "the adulation of the so-called intellectual group in America of the work of French modernists has caused a state of mind in every young artist which forces him to imitate the foreigners in order to be thought a good artist at all."

All great arts and literatures and moralities have been indigenous. Such things cannot be created by imitation. When American writers and painters get over their colonial inferiority complex and begin to write and paint in and of America we may look for something better than mediocre copies of European originals.

The fact that more and more American writers are discovering that there is something in their own country worth writing about is revealed in Edward J. H. O'Brien's statement that in searching for the best short stories of 1930 he found four of them in a privately circulated publication in the middle west; and his prediction that the center of American literature in the not far distant future will be in the vicinity of Iowa City! The further it gets away from the coast and the traditional coastal influence the better for both our art and our morals.

More and more we are impressed with the fact that a great obstacle in the way of restoration of public safety is the proneness of judges to consider only the culprits brought before them and to forget completely the claims of the public.

Al Capone seems to be laboring under the idea that his establishment is a little independent government within the confines of the United States. Before long he will be sending ambassadors to Washington.

A psychologist has decided that the average woman's thoughts are above her dress. We always had supposed that the human brain is located in the head and not in the feet.

Now that the sound and fury are at an end, we continue to be glad that we don't have to elect a president of the United States every two years.

WE'RE PREJUDICED!

Have you noticed that the world is prejudiced? We like Comedians more than we do Tragedians. The world may have a hankering for an occasional good cry, but it prefers smiles through its tears. A dry crust may be good for our souls, but we'd like a little butter and jam on our bread. Disinfectants are useful, we prefer a cool wind from the sea. Homely girls may have solid qualities but we flock around the pretty maidens. It's the way we are.

Your friend may be wise, but he is dull. He may have traveled to every corner of the earth, but all he talked about last night was his appendicitis operation and what he said to the street car conductor when he didn't stop at the right street. I'm prejudiced against him. Your friend is a man of sterling qualities, but his handshake is limp and I hold it against him. I'm unfair, I admit, but I can't help it. . . . Your other friend is a lightweight chatterbox, but he's amusing; he's fun to be with and I like him.

The World is Prejudiced. It plays favorites, it has its teacher's pets. It likes Daring, Dash and Audacity. Too often it overlooks Solid Worth to lavish its praise on lads and lasses with Pleasing Personalities. It feels, however, that it gets its money's worth.

It likes Square Guys, Brave Underdogs, Cheerful Fellows, Wagging Tails, Comradely Winks. It's prejudiced in favor of the capable and the strong, whose coat of arms includes a stiff upper lip. Sometimes it tiars off its coat, lights its pipe and feels at home in the house of quiet people who never wanted much and didn't get much either. It's prejudiced and can't help it.

Is Optimism shallow? The world likes it.
Is Hope a vain dream and Faith the creed of despair? The world has faith in both.
Is Courage futile? Hang on, Hang on, cries the world in admiration. Chuckling babies, laughing lads, strong men and women—these win the love of the world. Is that world unfair when it gives so much to those who do not need its praise? Perhaps, but it can't be helped. The world is prejudiced. I am prejudiced. . . . So are you.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.—I am sure my God has a sense of humor," says Earl Carroll.

So that's it, eh?

Some persons are awed by numbers. To members of The Congregation thus galed, it may be of interest to hear that 27,100 tons of structural steel were used in the construction of the new Waldorf, on Park Avenue. This exceeds by 4,759 the total tonnage of steel used in the Woolworth Building.

INNUMERABLE

What is it that prompts the average press agent, when addressing you professionally, to comb the universe for an array of gloomy, dismal, half-baked and wholly interesting statistical matter?

No one knows exactly just how many press agents there are in New York. There must be tens of thousands of them, and every day, in batches of twenty or more, they take turns in burdening my mail. I read every single, solitary word of their pulsing and vibrant communications and in this way, over a term of years, I have accumulated a mass of miscellaneous, extraneous, unrelated and conglomerate information that would spring the knee joints of a wooden Indian. I am a cold storage warehouse for bughouse data. My brain has become the world's greatest repository for useless facts.

WHAT OF IT?

As an example: A man I've never seen, whose name I don't know, of whose existence, until yesterday, I was in blissful ignorance, a total stranger who could never be caught by a mere acquaintance, writes me in the guise of press agent for a midtown hotel to acquaint me with the dazzling information that during the first nine months of the existence of the hostelry—but let me quote him:

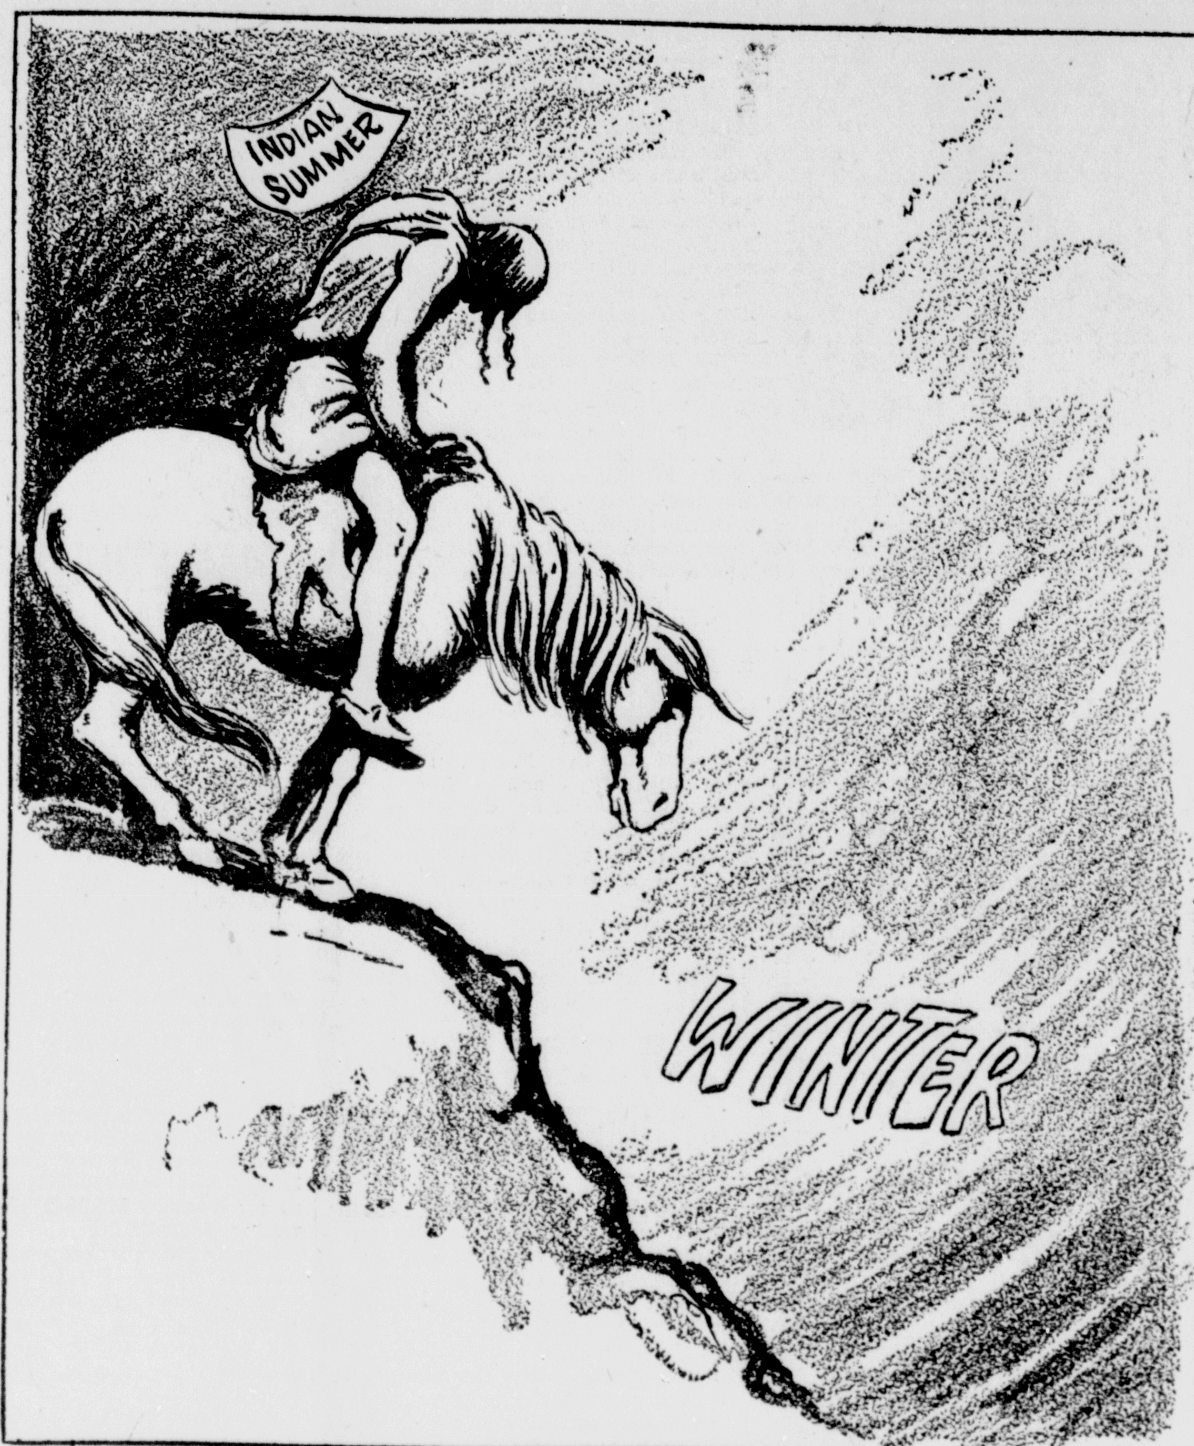

"...the little less than 500,000 guests who have filled the hotel have required 6,198 acres for rooms alone. If they were gathered together at one time and housed on a single floor the space required would cover 43 per cent of the total area of Manhattan Island."

As The Duchess so tenderly expresses it: "Even if it were true, what of it?"

END OF THE TRAIL

PUBLICATION OF LIST REVEALING WET SOLONS SURE TO BE DEMANDED

CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Few senators or representatives are so unsophisticated as not to realize that the public suspects the presence of many wet drinkers among dry voting members of congress.

The wet drinkers do not mind being merely suspected.

The threat of having a list of their names published is a more serious matter. Indeed, the knowledge that such a list is in existence gives them cold shivers.

And there is a list in existence. Its existence has been officially admitted.

Moreover, its publication is sure to be demanded when the lawmakers gather in Washington in December. Senator Brookhart of Iowa already has announced that he will demand it. No one who has the slightest acquaintance with the Hawkeye solon doubts that he will do all and more than all that he promises. The Iowa is not a wet drinker himself and has not a particle of sympathy for those who like a shot occasionally.

The dry-voting wet drinkers great difficulty is that they cannot very well fight Senator Brookhart's demand. If they do, they are certain to be accused of having personal reasons for doing so.

The list, as has been widely advertised, is Bootlegger George L. Cassidy's list of his congressional customers.

No peril is involved in referring to George as a bootlegger. He has written a series of articles concerning his experiences as a purveyor of wet goods to members of the national legislature, and at least one newspaper has printed the series under George's signature. George is the celebrated "man in the green hat" who actually operated his "cutting plant" for a long time in a room in the representatives' office building and afterward made a suite in the senators' building, his business headquarters.

Bootlegger Cassidy's final undoing was not the result of any indiscretion on his customers' part. The executive branch of the government put an agent a-spying on him.

The agent himself did not catch George, but it was due to his narrow-gauge hooch huts of the neighborhood reading plays he'd written and that weren't being produced because they were "too damn good for 'em." You could do any old thing or say any old thing in The Village these days and get away with it. The literati hadn't yet invaded those sacred precincts.

It's all changed now. The old bunch is scattered. They're living in Brooklyn, Staten Island, the Bronx, or Paris, and the woppy-jawed aggregation of mediocrities that hold forth today in what's left of The Village stand for violation of their prerogatives that would have made the old timers weep.

One of the landlords down there, advertising his studios, has the following sign nailed to the front door of the establishment:

"If you play a radio, pound a typewriter, use a sewing machine, sing in the bath tub, walk on high heels, get drunk and disorderly or raise the devil after 11 o'clock at night, don't move in here."

machinations that the regular city police did—with a pint of "licker" in his possession.

The pint did not matter much, but George's client list fell into the law's hands. That mattered a plenty.

Dr. J. M. Moran, who was prohibition commissioner at the time of George's hard luck, vouches for the list, and for the fact that the treasury and justice departments both have copies of it. Or maybe one of them is the original. Only one problem remains to be solved.

Is the list a complete list of all George's customers—representatives as well as senators—or is it a list simply of his senatorial customers? It is possible that it is the latter, for George had transferred his activities from the representatives to the senators' end of the capitol when the police grabbed him.

It must be an interesting list, even if none but senators' names are on it—if George is accurate in his statement that his patrons, first and last, included four-fifths of the members of both houses of congress.

Of course a list of names does not prove anything. It would be of no legal consequence anyway, for it already has been decided that liquor buying is not a criminal offense like liquor selling.

Nevertheless, the average member of congress does not care to have his name published as appearing on that scroll of Cassidy's. He does not even care to feel that Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and Attorney General Mitchell can take it out and look at it occasionally.

MENU HINT

Pork Chops Vegetable Goulash Boiled Rice Celery Apple Dumplings Tea or Coffee

You may eliminate the pork chops from your menu if you wish when you serve a dish like the vegetable goulash in today's menu. The rice may be left out, or baked potatoes may be used in its place.

Today's Recipes

Vegetable Goulash—Three tablespoons shortening, one tablespoon chopped onion, one tablespoon chopped pimento, two tablespoons flour, two cups canned tomatoes, one cup canned peas, one and one-half cups boiled rice, one tablespoon chopped parsley, two teaspoons salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, one-half cup grated cheese. Melt shortening, add onion and pimento. Cook slowly for five minutes. Add flour and mix well. Add tomatoes and cook until mixture thickens slightly, then add the other ingredients. Put in greased baking dish and sprinkle with grated cheese. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees Fahrenheit) twenty minutes.

Suggestions

The Well Rounded Diet Weight is a matter of excess calories. An active woman needs about 2,500 calories and in sedentary occupation requires from 2,000 to 2,200 calories to supply the body with sufficient energy for the day's work. Whatever calories are not used up during the day are stored in the body as fat. In that way we put on weight.

But we must remember there are many foods supplying minerals and vitamins and proteins that are necessary to our physical well-being. Whether we are reducing or not, we need proteins for body growth and repair. We need minerals like phosphorus and calcium for the development and repair of the bones and teeth. We need vitamins to protect us from infections, and to give us pep. A well-rounded daily diet includes vegetables, both cooked and raw, fruits, along with milk, eggs, some meats and a portion of whole-grained bread. To put on weight you will have to eat additional servings of food high in caloric value, such as an extra pat of butter, candies and pastries.

One of the most nearly perfect of our natural foods is milk. Whether we are plump or slender, we should never omit it from our diet. Nor is there any reason for not including it either as a beverage or in cooking. If you want to guard your health be generous in the amount of milk you include in your diet.

Easily Prepared Pumpkin After you clean the inside and remove the skin of a pumpkin, cut into long slices, then put the slices through the food chopper. The pumpkin will not have to boil as long and requires less mashing.

Arthritis Treatments

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

There was once an old set of directions about training fleas which began, "First catch your flea."

The first consideration about the treatment of arthritis is to catch on to what kind of an arthritis it is that you have.

Now is this any easier than for preparation for flea training.

Of course, with the acute form both diagnosis and treatment are usually simple. For years the use of the drug, sodium salicylate, has been the staple of treatment in the disease. In the chronic forms it is exceptionally important to be sure before beginning treatment that tuberculosis is or is not the cause of the symptoms. A few other definite infections may cause chronic rheumatism and should be tested for.

These ruled out, the treatment of chronic rheumatism or chronic arthritis may be undertaken without much regard to theories of cause. There are three schools of treatment popular today.

1. The focal infection or teeth-pulling school.
2. The diet school.
3. The physical therapy or balm, burn, pound, rub and drench school.

Which kind of treatment the patient with chronic arthritis gets first is not of very much importance, because sooner or later the poor things usually get all three—singly or in combination.

If I had the disease myself—and you know, I would like to pause and impress that phrase on you, it is a great thought. I think every doctor should write a book—not publish it necessarily—before he begins to practice medicine, called "What Would I Do If I Had—?" and then a list of all the diseases. A great surgeon in Boston has recently written a paper for doctors called "What would you do if you had an ulcer of the stomach?" I will tell you about it one of these days soon.

Well, if I had chronic arthritis, myself I would stick to physical therapy—massage, hot baths, lights, electricity, vibrators, etc. I would keep my teeth and I would eat whatever I darn pleased. There is enough grief associated with the disease all alone without having to worry about plates and go on a diet. My reasons for this conclusion will be divulged tomorrow.

Jealousy Is Selfishness

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

There are people who actually, think they show their love for others by being jealous of them and making their lives miserable by nagging at them about it.

And once in awhile they actually make the object of their jealousy think so, too. Haven't you heard women speak boastfully of their husbands' jealousy as if it showed an unusual amount of devotion, and half pitying other women whose husbands showed a deplorable amount of trust in them?

Most women and men, however, who have jealous mates, are anything but proud of them. They properly grieve for the lack of faith such an attitude shows, and realize that such a trait is evidence, not of deep affection, but of overbearing selfishness and self-centeredness.

A weary young wife who has suffered for some time from her husband's unreasonable jealousy writes: "DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am a girl of 20 years. I have been married three years to a man whom I loved, but the love is dead now."

"He drinks and blames me for going out with other men when I don't go anywhere without him. I feel I ought to go out with others so he really would have reason to say I went out."

"I just can't put up with this much longer. I told him that it's no use going on like we are, fussing all the time, so I want to break up and divorce him, but he won't have it that way. He says he loves me, but I don't love him. So, Virginia, what would you advise me to do? There are no children."

"DISGUSTED SALLY." I certainly wouldn't blame you, Sally, if you left him, if he drinks and makes life miserable for you by his jealousy. You feel like "having the game as you have the name," as the saying is, don't you? But I hardly think that would pay. Flirtations are more easily started than stopped, and your good name is worth more to you than a cheap flirtation.

I would advise you to try awhile longer to make a success of your married life, but I also tell you to inform Friend Husband that it is entirely up to him whether you stay with him or not. If he wants to do his part in making a home together, you will do your best to regain the love you formerly had for him, but if he persists in his selfish, jealous way, and makes himself obnoxious by excessive drinking, you will have no other alternative but to leave him and seek happiness elsewhere.

ANNA MARIE: You are young to be taking boys very seriously, so need not worry about that just now, although your letter might easily have been written by an older girl. I know what you mean by seeing the boys' faults and even being irritated by their mannerisms. That often happens, even with those one loves.

I sympathize with you for feeling so alone and wanting to be loved. That is but natural. You might, however, have had a disagreeable family which would have been bad. I suppose you are in school. Keep on with your schooling and let matters drift, if possible. Tell both boys if they want to get serious that you are too young for that yet awhile, and put them off, keeping both as friends. Tell them also that you cannot be sure of yourself.

Are you training for some special business or profession? I think it would be fine if you were, and could live your life with some kind of work that would absorb you for the next few years. Then as you grow older and meet more people you will learn to value them for the more substantial virtues and to know whether you really love a person or love the feeling that they love you.

I hope this advice will be a little helpful. Write me again if you care to. I will be interested to hear how you are progressing.

BLUE EYES: If you want to go with other boys you must give the boy friend the privilege of going with other girls, even if you are inclined to be jealous of him. That's fair, you know.

PEG: If the boy had wanted to meet you he surely could have managed it some time in the course of the three years he has lived near you. Why try to meet him? He probably isn't interested.

Avoid Stretching Skin

By GLADYS GLAD

Some time ago, a vaudeville star who found the first bloom of his youth fading, invented a painless method of face lifting. For some reason she didn't want to undergo the knife to regain her youthful appearance. But she was getting quite old, and something, she told herself, simply had to be done.

Her first attempt to lift her sagging jowls was pretty crude, although she obtained the effect she desired. She pasted a strip of adhesive plaster just in front of the hairline above each ear and attached to these strips of tape a piece of very narrow rubber banding. The elastic was short enough so that when the two pieces of adhesive were in place, and the rubber stretched over the back of the head, the skin was pulled tight across the face. The hair, of course, was arranged over the elastic to obscure it.

Later, she made the apparatus much neater looking. And from a distance, her appearance was greatly improved. But I shall never forget the day that she let down one side of her face to show me what a difference the lifts made. The difference was astounding! The constant pull on her facial muscles had stretched her skin to such an extent that it actually hung in folds about her face. And when she had dragged her skin up again with the plaster, I saw what had not attracted my attention at first. A big ruffle of loose skin was apparent at her temple, and even her hair arranged over the plaster could not hide it.

Such an apparatus is contrary to one of the fundamental rules of facial care—that the skin should be stretched as little as possible whether in massaging, cleansing, creaming, rouging or powdering. I want to warn my readers against ever using any such apparatus.

The skin is extremely elastic and every hour's strain on such a tightly-drawn face only stretches the skin further. Old skin hasn't the resilience of young skin, any more than an old piece of rubber has the resilience of new rubber. Therefore, if you stretch your skin as this woman did, it will become permanently stretched, and will be twice as loose as it naturally should be.

Freckles

Mrs. Mary Ward and Mrs. W. Lemon juice or dilute peroxide are excellent freckle bleaches. Hot oil treatments may help to take some of the dye out of your hair. But you will have to let it grow out to entirely remove it.

Superfluous Hair M. W. R. Embarrassed and H. C. If you bleach superfluous hair with a solution of two teaspoonfuls of peroxide and one-half teaspoonful of household ammonia, it will not be noticeable. It can be removed permanently by expert use of the electric needle.

Oliver Oil Mrs. W. A. C. I have never heard of a case in which olive oil has caused the growth of hair on the face. Massage your legs with warmed cocoa butter nightly to help fatten the tissues. Also, practice vigorous leg exercises daily.

EDITOR'S NOTE: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer beauty questions by mail, she will be happy to send you her pamphlet on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture," if you will write her, care of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope and 10 cents in coin, for each, to cover cost of printing and mailing. Personal questions on beauty will be answered through Miss Glad's daily column.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

GOOD MEMORY

Colonel Eddie Rickenbacker has a better memory than most of his countrymen if he did not have to look up the records to find out why he was summoned to Washington last week to receive a congressional medal for something he did 145 months ago. War's glories are fleeting. After all these years, Americans generally might be pardoned for thinking that congress was awarding the "ace of aces" of the American forces in the World War a medal for making automobiles, which is what this modern Cincinnati returned home to turn his hand to.

The act for which the medal presented to Colonel Rickenbacker last week was awarded, according to the citation, was performed in France in September, 1918. What conceivable excuse has there been for keeping the breast he gallantly exposed to enemy fire indecorated until a dozen years after the return of peace? Colonel Rickenbacker's case of deferred honor is by no means the most inexplicable that could be cited. Civil war veterans are still being handed honors they earned on the battlefield nearly 70 years ago.

An honor unduly deferred is like charity that comes too late. The years when the recipient might have been enjoying what he has earned are likely to breed resentment. A man who risks his life for his country doesn't like to be treated like a workman, whose pay is withheld for a week or a month lest he jump his job. The adage of better late than never is the refuge of procrastination, which could not show to poorer advantage than where merit is entitled to recognition.

FOLLOWING SUIT

Sir Philip Gibbs says that American writers of the most modern school "are intellectual bolsheviks proclaiming a contempt for the old moralities." We take it that by bolsheviks Sir Philip means iconoclasts. Albert Sterner, associate of the National Academy of Design, states that "the adulation of the so-called intellectual group in America of the work of French modernists has caused a state of mind in every young artist which forces him to imitate the foreigners in order to be thought a good artist at all."

All great arts and literatures and moralities have been indigenous. Such things cannot be created by imitation. When American writers and painters get over their colonial inferiority complex and begin to write and paint in and of America we may look for something better than mediocre copies of European originals.

The fact that more and more American writers are discovering that there is something in their own country worth writing about is revealed in Edward J. H. O'Brien's statement that in searching for the best short stories of 1930 he found four of them in a privately circulated publication in the middle west; and his prediction that the center of American literature in the not far distant future will be in the vicinity of Iowa City. The further it gets away from the coast and the traditional coastal influence the better for both our art and our morals.

More and more we are impressed with the fact that a great obstacle in the way of restoration of public safety is the proneness of judges to consider only the culprit brought before them and to forget completely the claims of the public.

Al Capone seems to be laboring under the idea that his establishment is a little independent government within the confines of the United States. Before long he will be sending ambassadors to Washington.

A psychologist has decided that the average woman's thoughts are above her dress. We always had supposed that the human brain is located in the head and not in the feet.

Now that the sound and fury are at an end, we continue to be glad that we don't have to elect a president of the United States every two years.

WERE PREJUDICED!

Have you noticed that the world is prejudiced? We like comedians more than we do tragedians. The world may have a hankering for an occasional good cry, but it prefers smiles through its tears. A dry crust may be good for our souls, but we'd like a little butter and jam on our bread. Disinfectants are useful, we prefer a cool wind from the sea. Maiden girls may have solid qualities but we flock around the pretty maidens. It's the way we are.

Your friend may be wise, but he is dull. He may have traveled to every corner of the earth, but all he talked about last night was his appendicitis operation and what he said to the street car conductor when he didn't stop at the right street. I'm prejudiced against him.

Your friend is a man of sterling qualities, but his handshake is limp and I hold it against him. I'm unfair, I admit, but I can't help it. . . . Your other friend is a lightweight chatterbox, but he's amusing; he's fun to be with and I like him.

The World is Prejudiced. It plays favorites, it has its teacher's pets. It likes Daring, Dash and Audacity. Too often it overlooks Solid Worth to lavish its praise on lads and lasses with Pleasing Personalities. It feels, however, that it gets its money's worth.

It likes Square Guys, Brave Underdogs, Cheerful Fellows, Wagging Tails, Comradely Winks. It's prejudiced in favor of the capable and the strong, whose coat of arms includes a stiff upper lip. Sometimes it flatters ruthless ambition and obeys its imperious command, but it takes off its coat, lights its pipe and feels at home in the house of quiet people who never wanted much and didn't get much either. It's prejudiced and can't help it.

Is Optimism shallow? The world likes it. Is Hope a vain dream and Faith the creed of despair? The world has faith in both.

Is Courage futile? Hang on. Hang on, cries the world in admiration. Chattering babies, laughing lads, strong men and women—these win the love of the world. Is that world unfair when it gives so much to those who do not need its praise? Perhaps, but it can't be helped. The world is prejudiced. I am prejudiced. . . . So are you.

No peril is involved in referring to George as a bootlegger. He has written a series of articles concerning his experiences as a purveyor of wet goods to members of the national legislature, and at least one newspaper has printed the series under George's signature. George is the celebrated "man in the green hat" who actually operated his "cutting plant" for a long time in a room in the representatives' office building and afterward made a suite in the senators' building, his business headquarters.

Bootlegger Cassidy's final undoing was not the result of any indiscretion on his customers' part. The executive branch of the government put an agent a-spying on him.

The agent himself did not catch George, but it was due to his narrow-gauge hooch huts of the neighborhood reading plays he'd written and that weren't produced because they were "too damn good for 'em." You could do any old thing or say any old thing in The Village then and no-body cared, because the literati hadn't yet invaded those sacred precincts.

It's all changed now. The old bunch is scattered. They're living in Brooklyn, Staten Island, the Bronx, or Paris, and the woppy-lavard aggregation of mediocrities that hold forth today in what's left of The Village, stand for violation of their prerogatives that would have made the old timers weep.

One of the landlords down there, advertising his studios, has the following sign nailed to the front door of the establishment:

"If you play a radio, pound a typewriter, use a sewing machine, sing in the bath tub, walk on high heels, get drunk and disorderly or raise the devil after 11 o'clock at night, don't move in here."

machinations that the regular city police did—with a pint of "licker" in his possession.

The pint did not matter much, but George's client list fell into the law's hands. That mattered a plenty.

Dr. J. M. Moran, who was prohibition commissioner at the time of George's hard luck, vouches for the list, and for the fact that the treasury and justice departments both have copies of it. Or maybe one of them is the original. Only one problem remains to be solved.

Is the list a complete list of all George's customers—representatives as well as senators—or is it a list simply of his senatorial customers? It is possible that it is the latter, for George had transferred his activities from the representatives' to the senators' end of the capitol when the police grabbed him.

It must be an interesting list, even if none but senators' names are on it—if George is accurate in his statement that his patrons, first and last, included four-fifths of the members of both houses of congress.

Of course a list of names does not prove anything. It would be of no legal consequence anyway, for it already has been decided that liquor buying is not a criminal offense like liquor selling.

Nevertheless, the average member of congress does not care to have his name published as appearing on that scroll of Cassidy's. He does not even care to feel that Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and Attorney General Mitchell can take it out and look at it occasionally.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

By MRS. MARY MORTON

MENU HINT
Pork Chops Vegetable Goulash
Boiled Rice Apple Dumplings
Tea or Coffee

You may eliminate the pork chops from your menu if you wish when you serve a dish like the vegetable goulash in today's menu. The rice may be left out, or baked potatoes may be used in its place.

Today's Recipes
Vegetable Goulash—Three tablespoons shortening, one tablespoon chopped onion, one tablespoon chopped pimento, two tablespoons flour, two cups canned tomatoes, one cup canned peas, one and one-half cups boiled rice, one teaspoon chopped parsley, two teaspoons salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, one-half cup grated cheese. Melt shortening, add onion and pimento. Cook slowly for five minutes. Add flour and mix well. Add tomatoes and cook until mixture thickens slightly, then add the other ingredients. Put in greased baking dish and sprinkle with grated cheese. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees Fahrenheit) twenty minutes.

Suggestions

The Well Rounded Diet
Weight is a matter of excess calories. An active woman needs about 2,500 calories and one in sedentary occupation requires from 2,000 to 2,200 calories to supply the body with sufficient energy for the day's work. Whatever calories are not used up during the day are stored in the body as fat. In that way we put on weight.

But we must remember there are many foods supplying minerals and vitamins and proteins that are necessary to our physical well-being whether we are reducing or not. We need proteins for body growth and repair. We need minerals like phosphorus and calcium for the development and repair of the bones and teeth. We need vitamins to protect us from infections, and to give us pep. A well-rounded daily diet includes vegetables, both cooked and raw, fruits, along with milk, eggs, some meats and a portion of whole-grained bread. To put on weight you will have to eat additional servings of food high in caloric value, such as an extra pat of butter, candies and pastries.

One of the most nearly perfect of our natural foods is milk. Whether we are plump or slender we should never omit it from our diet. Nor is there any reason for not including it either as a beverage or in cooking. If you want to guard your health be generous in the amount of milk you include in your diet.

Easily Prepared Pumpkin
After you clean the inside and remove the skin of a pumpkin, cut into long slices, then put the slices through the food chopper. The pumpkin will not have to boil as long and requires less mashing.

Back Saver

Fix the handle of a discarded broom into your short-handed dust pan. Only a few minutes' labor and much added comfort.

Arthritis Treatments

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

There was once an old set of directions about training fleas which began, "First catch your flea."

The first consideration about the treatment of arthritis is to catch on to what kind of an arthritis it is that you have.

Nor is this any easier than for preparation for flea training. Of course, with the acute form both diagnosis and treatment are usually simple. For years the use of the drug, sodium salicylate, has been the staple of treatment in the disease. In the chronic forms it is exceptionally important to be sure before beginning treatment that tuberculosis is or is not the cause of the symptoms. A few other definite infections may cause chronic rheumatism and should be tested for.

These ruled out, the treatment of chronic rheumatism or chronic arthritis may be undertaken without much regard to theories of cause. There are three schools of treatment popular today.

1. The focal infection or teeth-pulling school.
2. The diet school.
3. The physical therapy or heat, burn, pound, rub and drench school.

Which kind of treatment the patient with chronic arthritis gets first is not a very much importance, because sooner or later the poor things usually get all three—singly or in combination.

If I had the disease myself—and you know I would like to pause and impress that phrase on you, it is a great thought. I think every doctor should write a book—not publish it necessarily—before he begins to practice medicine, called "What Would I Do If I Had—?" and then a list of all the diseases. A great surgeon in Boston has recently written a paper for doctors called "What would you do if you had an ulcer of the stomach?" It will tell you about it one of these days soon.

Well, if I had chronic arthritis, myself I would stick to physical therapy—massage, hot baths, lights, electricity, vibrators, etc. I would keep my teeth and I would eat whatever I darn pleased. There is enough grief associated with the disease all alone without having to worry about plates and go on a diet.

My reasons for this conclusion will be divulged tomorrow.

Jealousy Is Selfishness

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

There are people who actually think they show their love for others by being jealous of them and making their lives miserable by nagging at them about it.

And once in awhile they actually make the object of their jealousy think so, too. Haven't you heard when some boastfully of their husband's jealousy as if it showed an unusual amount of devotion, and half pitying other women whose husbands showed a deplorable amount of trust in them?

Most women and men, however, who have jealous mates, are anything but proud of them. They properly grieve for the lack of faith such an attitude shows, and realize that such a trait is evidence, not of deep affection, but of overweening selfishness and self-centeredness.

A weary young wife who has suffered for some time from her husband's unreasonable jealousy writes:

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am a girl of 20 years. I have been married three years to a man whom I loved, but the love is dead now."

"He drinks and blames me for going out with other men when I don't go anywhere without him. I feel I ought to go out with others so he really would have reason to say I went out."

"He is terribly jealous, even at a dance when I dance with other men. He says I am in love with them."

"I just can't put up with this much longer. I told him that it's no use going on like we are, fussing all the time, so I want to break up and divorce him, but he won't have it that way. He says he loves me, but I don't love him. So, Virginia, what would you advise me to do? There are no children."

"DISGUSTED SALLY."

I certainly wouldn't blame you, Sally, if you left him, if he drinks and makes life miserable for you by his jealousy. You feel like "having the game as you have the name," as the saying is, don't you? But I hardly think that would pay. Flirtations are more easily started than stopped, and your good name is worth more to you than a cheap flirtation.

I would advise you to try awhile longer to make a success of your married life, but I also tell you to inform Friend Husband that if he flirts with other girls you will meet him sure you could have managed it some time in the course of the three years he has lived near you. Why try to interest him? He probably isn't interested.

BLUE EYES: If you want to go with other boys you must give the boy friend the privilege of going with other girls, even if you are inclined to be jealous of him. That's fair, you know.

PEG: If the boy had wanted to meet you he surely could have managed it some time in the course of the three years he has lived near you. Why try to interest him? He probably isn't interested.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Freckles
Mrs. Mary Ward and Mrs. W. J. Lemon juice or dilute peroxide are excellent freckle bleaches. Hot oil treatments may help to take some of the dye out of your hair. But you will have to let it grow out to entirely remove it.

Superfluities Hair
M. W. R., Embarrassed and H. C.: If you bleach superfluities hair with a solution of two teaspoons of peroxide and one-half teaspoon of household ammonia, it will not be noticeable. It can be removed permanently by expert use of the electric needle.

Olive Oil
Mrs. W. A. C.: I have never heard of a case in which olive oil has caused the growth of hair on the face. Massage your legs with warm cocoa butter nightly to help fatten the tissues. Also, practice vigorous leg exercises daily.

SPORT SNAP SHOTS FRAMED by Phil

The problem of injuries is always a big one for every coach and it seems impossible to eliminate this difficulty in a game with as much physical contact as there is in football, according to L. A. "Polly" Wallace, former All-American center with Iowa State, who writes an interesting article on this subject in a Lowe and Campbell house publication.

"Too many coaches seem to resign themselves to the fact that a certain number of injuries must occur but they fail to appreciate that it is possible to minimize them without noticeably handicapping the team," he says.

Discussing the protective instinct, Wallace asserts "it is repeatedly said that certain players never get hurt because they are rough or too husky."

It is true, he argues, that "we all differ in physical make-up but on the other hand, we all have the same muscles and bones, though developed in varying degrees."

"What is really of more importance is that some players learn to protect themselves while others do not. Call this protective instinct 'yellow' if you will but one must admire the player who can guard himself without handicapping his game. Most of the truly great players learn to save themselves and still are not the ones who usually call 'time-out'."

"One great protection not fully realized lies in the fact that if a player overrides the other man, he will not be the one to get hurt. The hardest driving team suffers the least from injuries, other things being equal. When players begin to 'loaf' or get tired, then the hospital list increases. It seems logical to work a string of men in shorter periods and have them driving hard all the time."

"Have the boys jog on their toes for about one quarter mile every afternoon when they first come out for practice. This will help to prevent turned ankles and pulled muscles while passing and kicking. The legs get warmed up, and if stocking are worn and the boys keep moving, their legs will stay warm."

"Impress the fact on the players that when they hit with their shoulders, the muscles should be raising the shoulder with an extra snap at the moment of contact. This will practically eliminate the injury called 'knocked down' shoulder. The principles in this illustration can be illustrated by allowing the shoulder to hang loosely while the body is erect and having someone give a quick push downward on the point. Now raise the shoulder by using the muscles and you will find a much harder push or blow can be absorbed without pain."

"A tackler can hit head on and give a much harder blow if the arm is raised and the shoulder muscles force the point of the shoulder into the runner. There is also less likelihood of injury than if the shoulder is allowed to droop either because of carelessness."

"Many shoulders are injured in contact with the ground either by falling on the shoulder when it is dropped or by falling on the elbow especially when the ball is in the arm. An extra effort of a player to raise the shoulder or throw himself so that he will not fall either on his elbow or the ball just before hitting the ground, makes a fracture well high impossible."

"Experience will teach a player the art of not allowing his opponent to hit squarely. There are many ways that the ball carrier can take the shock from a smashing tackle, and instruction along this line will prove profitable."

This is a pretty lengthy article for this column but even though somewhat belated we thought it might be timely in view of the fact Xenia Central gridgers have so many injuries every season.

FOUR ELIMINATED IN SCHOOL TOURNEY

In the Xenia Central senior high school volleyball elimination series four teams fell by the wayside Tuesday as a result of four games played.

Indiana defeated Minnesota in a close battle, 22 to 21. Lane and Diamond led the attack for the winners. Purdue defeated Iowa 33 to 16 in the second game which was more or less a listless contest. Luttrell was the main cog in the offense of Purdue. Chicago nosed out Wisconsin 37 to 33 in the third contest after a heated battle. Punderburg and Gill played fine games for the winners and Adair and Arment showed up well for the losers. The father is being held at police headquarters but no charge has been filed against him as police are awaiting the outcome of the son's injuries.

West Market Athletic Club of Columbus, Ohio, is again in the field with another good basketball team and would like to schedule games, in this vicinity, with first class teams. These games to be played on a 60-40 percentage basis (winner taking 60 per cent of total gate receipts).

CEDARVILLE COLLEGE LOSES TO URBANA 12-0 ARMISTICE DAY

Cedarville College, minus two regulars, bowed to Urbana Junior College by a score of 12 to 0 in a return football game played as an Armistice Day feature on the Urbana gridiron Tuesday afternoon. Earlier in the season these two eleven played a 6 to 6 tie.

The contest attracted more than a thousand spectators as it was Urbana's last game of its abbreviated season and its first important game at home.

With both team relying on straight football methods, the struggle was devoid of spectacular features, but the Borstmen were outclassed, Urbana registering twenty first downs to five for the Yellow-Jackets. Four of Cedarville's first downs were due to frequent penalties.

The first touchdown resulted when Baker, sub quarter, hurled a ten yard pass over the goal line to Eggleston, left end, and the second marker came when Fullback Blair skirted right end for thirty-five yards. Both goal attempts failed.

Not fully recovered from the effects of the hard game with Wilmington College last Friday, Cedarville gridgers were not in the best of physical shape and two regulars were missing from their lineup. Halfback Hinton, of Mechanicsburg, and Kentucky, sub end, of Woodstock, showed up well for Cedarville.

Both Coach Marvin Borst of Cedarville and Coach W. J. Farmer, of Urbana, are former Wittenberg College grid stars, the former starting on the line for Woodstock in Champaign County in his high school days.

Cedarville's next game is with Morehead State at Morehead, Ky., Saturday, November 22. Lineups: Urbana Pos. Cedarville Eggleston L. E. G. Boyer Crowell L. T. Scott Bowden L. G. Gordon Heggie C. PURDUE PROFESSOR SERIOUSLY HURT IN EXPLOSION OF BOMB

LAFAYETTE, Ind. Nov. 12.—William Heidergott, professor of research at Purdue University, was seriously injured by the explosion of a bomb when he opened the door of his garage today.

The right side of his leg was shattered and one arm was broken. He was rushed to St. Elizabeth Hospital in a critical condition.

Mystery surrounded the bombing outrage.

NO CHARGES FILED

Condition of Earl Clark, 21, colored, E. Third St., who is confined in the County Infirmary hospital with serious stab wounds in the back and chest, inflicted, police say, with a pocket knife wielded by his father, Albert, 56, during a quarrel at their home Monday night, remained unchanged Wednesday. The father is being held at police headquarters but no charge has been filed against him as police are awaiting the outcome of the son's injuries.

HUNTING SEASON TO OPEN SATURDAY FOR RABBITS AND BIRDS

Saturday will usher in the beginning of the open hunting season on ring-neck pheasants, rabbits and Hungarian partridges and a majority of Greene County's licensed hunters is expected to be afield for the first day of the sport.

Because of bag limits and other regulations of the division of conservation there is expected to be an abundance of game with no danger of the supply of partridges, pheasants and rabbits being depleted.

Ernest Harner, county game warden, is asking hunters to obtain permission of land owners before trespassing on private property. Shopping early for hunting licenses is also the word being passed along. The open season for rabbit hunting extends from November 15 to January 1 with a bag limit of five a day. The bag limit on partridges is six a day and the open season is from November 15 to November 25. The open season on pheasants also ends November 25 and the bag limit is two a day.

HUNTED WITHOUT LICENSES; FINED

Two 20-year-old Dayton youths, Walter Wren and Harold Brunner, were each fined $25 and costs by Magistrate A. E. Longstrech, Bath Twp. justice of the peace, Tuesday on charges of hunting without licenses.

The charges were preferred by Ernest Harner, Greene County game warden, who was summoned to the farm of Samuel Harshman, living on the Beaver Creek Road, four miles north of Alpha, to apprehend a party of youthful hunters trespassing on his property.

The game warden rounded up the five youths on the nearby farm of S. H. Shuman, Valley Road. Two were unarmed and were released while a third was able to produce his hunting license. The remaining two possessed no licenses.

The game warden found one rabbit which he believes the hunters had bagged.

N. Y. STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—The stock market was unsettled in the early trading today by the Iron Age's weekly summary of the steel trade, which showed a further decline of 4 per cent in operations, to 44 per cent of mill capacity.

United States Steel dipped to 139 1/2 and Bethlehem Steel under 50; but selling dried up early in the second hour and no special weakness was in evidence in this section of the list. Selling of American Tel. and Tel. forced that stock down to a new low at 179. And further liquidation of the theatrical stocks, Loews and Fox was seen in the new decline in these speculative favorites. With the exception of Standard Gas and Public Service of N. J., the public utility stocks were in good form, selling within a narrow range of Tuesday's final prices.

With prices of industrial favorites slightly lower than at the wind up of the previous session, the market entered a period of dullness in the second hour. Buying demand for stocks tapered off, but the pressure to sell was also considerably smaller than in the last two days.

The problem of injuries is always a big one for every coach and it seems impossible to eliminate this difficulty in a game with as much physical contact as there is in football, according to L. A. "Polly" Wallace, former All-American center with Iowa State, who writes an interesting article on this subject in a Lowe and Campbell house publication.

"Too many coaches seem to resign themselves to the fact that a certain number of injuries must occur but they fail to appreciate that it is possible to minimize them without noticeably handicapping the team," he says.

Discussing the protective instinct, Wallace asserts "it is repeatedly said that certain players never get hurt because they are rough or too husky."

It is true, he argues, that "we all differ in physical make-up but on the other hand, we all have the same muscles and bones, though developed in varying degrees."

"What is really of more importance is that some players learn to protect themselves while others do not. Call this protective instinct 'yellow' if you will but one must admire the player who can guard himself without handicapping his game. Most of the truly great players learn to save themselves and still are not the ones who usually call 'time-out.'"

"One great protection not fully realized lies in the fact that if a player outdrives the other man, he will not be the one to get hurt. The hardest driving team suffers the least from injuries, other things being equal. When players begin to 'loaf' or get tired, then the hospital list increases. It seems logical to work a string of men in shorter periods and have them driving hard all the time."

"Have the boys jog on their toes for about one quarter mile every afternoon when they first come out for practice. This will help prevent turned ankles and pulled muscles while passing and kicking. The legs get warmed up, and if stocking are worn and the boys keep moving, their legs will stay warm."

"Impress the fact on the players that when they hit with their shoulders, the muscles should be raised the shoulder with an extra snap at the moment of contact. This will practically eliminate the injury called 'knocked down' shoulder. The principles in this illustration can be illustrated by allowing the shoulder to hang loosely while the body is erect and having someone give a quickpush downward on the point. Now raise the shoulder by using the muscles and you will find a much harder push or blow can be absorbed without pain."

"A tackler can hit head on and give a much harder blow if the arm is raised and the shoulder muscles force the point of the shoulder into the runner. There is also less likelihood of injury than if the shoulder is allowed to droop either because of carelessness."

"Many shoulders are injured in contact with the ground either by falling on the shoulder when it is dropped or by falling on the elbow especially when the ball is in the arm. An extra effort of a player to raise the shoulder or throw himself so that he will not fall either on his elbow or the ball just before hitting the ground, makes a fracture well nigh impossible."

"Experience will teach a player the art of not allowing his opponent to hit his squarely. There are many ways that the ball carrier can take the shock from a smashing tackle, and instruction along this line will prove profitable."

This is a pretty lengthy article for this column but even though somewhat belated we thought it might be timely in view of the fact Xenia Central gridders have so many injuries every season.

FOUR ELIMINATED IN SCHOOL TOURNEY

In the Xenia Central senior high school volleyball ball elimination series four teams fell by the wayside Tuesday as a result of four games played.

Indiana defeated Minnesota in a close battle, 22 to 21. Lane and Diamond led the attack for the winners. Purdue defeated Iowa 33 to 16 in the second game which was more or less a listless contest. Luttrell was the main cog in the offense of Purdue. Chicago nosed out Wisconsin 37 to 33 in the third contest after a heated battle. Punderburg and Gill played fine games for the winners and Adair and Arment showed up well for the losers. In the most exciting game of the day Illinois defeated Ohio State 30 to 29. It was a neck and neck affair throughout with neither team having a large lead over the other at any time. Jones and Adams kept the winners ahead by their fine play and Storer and Schardt of the losers made things hot for them.

TEAM WANTS GAMES

West Market Athletic Club of Columbus, Ohio, is again in the field with another good basketball team and would like to schedule games in this vicinity, with first class teams. These games to be played on a 50-40 percentage basis (winner taking 60 per cent of total gate receipts).

For full details write Carl L. Kaestner, 988 St. Clair Ave., Columbus, Ohio.

CEDARVILLE COLLEGE LOSES TO URBANA 12-0 ARMISTICE DAY

Cedarville College, minus two regulars, bowed to Urbana Junior College by a score of 12 to 0 in a return football game played as an Armistice Day feature on the Urbana gridiron Tuesday afternoon. Earlier in the season these two eleven played a 6 to 6 tie.

The contest attracted more than a thousand spectators as it was Urbana's last game of its abbreviated season and its first important game at home.

With both team relying on straight football methods, the struggle was devoid of spectacular features, but the Borstmen were outclassed, Urbana registering twenty first downs to five for the Red Wings.

The Red Wing Co. bowling team continued its meteoric climb in the Recreation League by winning three games in a row from the Xenia Shoes in a match Tuesday night. The third-placers recorded a three-game total of 2,766, led by Martin, who had a 589 series.

"Dinty" Moore's 589 series was high for the losers. Box score: Red Wing Co. Anderson 176 216 179 Highley 161 212 203 Smith 161 186 178 Martin 190 210 189 Pesavento 176 166 163 Totals 864 990 912

PURDUE PROFESSOR SERIOUSLY HURT IN EXPLOSION OF BOMB

LAFAYETTE, Ind. Nov. 12.—William Heidergott, professor of research at Purdue University, was seriously injured by the explosion of a bomb when he opened the door of his garage today.

The right side of his leg was shattered and one arm was broken. He was rushed to St. Elizabeth Hospital in a critical condition.

Mystery surrounded the bombing outrage.

NO CHARGES FILED

Condition of Earl Clark, 21, colored, E. Third St., who is confined in the County Infirmary hospital with serious stab wounds in the back and chest, inflicted, police say, with a pocket knife wielded by his father, Albert, 56, during a quarrel at their home Monday night, remained unchanged Wednesday. The father is being held at police headquarters but no charge has been filed against him as police are awaiting the outcome of the son's injuries.

Yellow-Jackets. Four of Cedarville's first downs were due to frequent penalties.

The first touchdown resulted when Baker, sub quarter, hurled a ten yard pass over the goal line to Eggleson, left end, and the second marker came when Fullback Blair skirted right end for thirty-five yards. Both goal attempts failed.

Not fully recovered from the effects of the hard game with Wilmington College last Friday, Cedarville gridders were not in the best of physical shape and two regulars were missing from their lineup. Halfback Hinton, of Mechanicsburg, and Kentucky, sub end, of Woodstock, showed up well for Cedarville.

Both Coach Marvin Borst of Cedarville and Coach W. J. Farmer, of Urbana, are former Wittenberg College grid stars, the former starting on the line for Woodstock in Champaign County in his high school days.

Cedarville's next game is with Morehead State at Morehead, Ky., Saturday, November 22. Lineups: Urbana Pos. Cedarville Eggleston L. E. G. Boyer Crowl L. T. Scott Bowden L. G. Gordon Hegeler C. Stormont (c) Middleton R. G. Collins Driver R. T. Iddings Johnston R. E. Townsley Kerns Q. B. Turner Blair L. H. Hinton Hanaway L. H. Allen Hanaway F. B. INJURED BY CANNON USED IN PARADE

Roscoe J. Christopher, 210 N. West St., Xenia post office messenger, was given first aid by Dr. A. D. DeHaven and then treated at the office of Dr. Marshall Best for powder burns in the left eye received when a miniature cannon was discharged in post hall of the American Legion Tuesday. The device, later used in the Armistice Day parade, was being tested at the time. Powder was blown into his face and penetrated the left eye.

WIFE ASKS DIVORCE

Charging extreme cruelty for the last five years, Margaret Jones has brought suit in Common Pleas Court seeking a divorce from Loyd Jones and custody of their two minor children, Lloyd, Jr., 8, and Bobby Morris, 5, now being cared for at the O. S. and S. O. Home. They were married October 23, 1920. The plaintiff complains her husband often came home intoxicated and would abuse his family and that he has not lived with or supported his family for the last two years.

HUNTING SEASON TO OPEN SATURDAY FOR RABBITS AND BIRDS

Saturday will usher in the beginning of the open hunting season on ring-neck pheasants, rabbits and Hungarian partridges and a majority of Greene County's licensed hunters is expected to be afield for the first day of the sport.

Because of bag limits and other regulations of the division of conservation there is expected to be an abundance of game with no danger of the supply of partridges, pheasants and rabbits being depleted.

Ernest Harner, county game warden, is asking hunters to obtain permission of land owners before trespassing on private property. Shop early for hunting licenses is also the word being passed along. The open season for rabbit hunting extends from November 15 to January 1 with a bag limit of five a day. The bag limit on partridges is six a day and the open season is from November 15 to November 25. The open season on pheasants also ends November 25 and the bag limit is two a day.

HUNTED WITHOUT LICENSES; FINED

Two 20-year-old Dayton youths, Walter Wynn and Harold Brunner, were each fined $25 and costs by Magistrate A. E. Longstreth, Bath Twp. justice of the peace, Tuesday on charges of hunting without licenses.

The charges were preferred by Ernest Harner, Greene County game warden, who was summoned to the farm of Samuel Harshman, living on the Beaver Creek Road, four miles north of Alpha, to apprehend a party of youthful hunters trespassing on his property.

The game warden rounded up the five youths on the nearby farm of S. H. Shawhan, Valley Road. Two were unarmed and were released while a third was able to produce his hunting license. The remaining two possessed no license.

The game warden found one rabbit which he believes the hunters had bagged.

N. Y. STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. — The stock market was unsettled in the early trading today by the Iron Age's weekly summary of the steel trade, which showed a further decline of 4 per cent in operations, to 44 per cent of mill capacity.

United States Steel dipped to 139 1/2 and Bethlehem Steel under 50; but selling dried up early in the second hour and no special weakness was in evidence in this section of the list. Selling of American Tel. and Tel. forced that stock down to a new low at 17 3/4. And further liquidation of the theatrical stocks, Loews and Fox was seen in the new decline in these speculative favorites. With the exception of Standard Gas and Public Service of N. J., the public utility stocks were in good form, selling within a narrow range of Tuesday's final prices.

With prices of industrial favorites slightly lower than at the wind up of the previous session, the market entered a period of dullness in the second hour. Buying demand for stocks tapered off, but the pressure to sell was also considerably smaller than in the last two days.

CHAPTER 37

"Gone!"

The exclamation was uttered by Inspector Linscott as the sound of the fleeing motor became dimmer and dimmer in the warm night air. "We must get a car and follow him!" insisted the explorer, dragging at the Inspector's arm. "I got him both shots, I'm certain. I only fired to maim, not to kill, and both the bullets hit in his legs. . . ."

"No use trying to overtake him in a car," replied the Inspector. "I'll get in touch with the Yard and have men waiting for him when he arrives in London." "He'll expect that," objected Bruce Armstrong. "And make good his escape!"

"I doubt it," was the unfurled rejoinder, as Inspector Linscott started towards the telephone. "Anyhow, our men are patient. Sometime he will want to return to his house, and when he does they will be waiting for him." "You don't think he'll try to clear out of the country?" asked Armstrong incredulously. "I think we took him completely unawares and that he will want something he has in his house before he disappears for good. That's when we'll get him. . . . Or sooner," he added, "if we can find the surgeon he goes to for the marks you left on him."

"I should have killed him," the explorer said ruefully. "Don't you worry," The Inspector smiled quizzically. "The civilized police system of England isn't as helpless as you think. And, quite frankly, I'd rather see the fellow hang!"

"What was it?" Lady Dorothy's quavering voice interrupted them. She, with Lady Gwendolen on her arm, had slipped into the room unobserved. "Did you get him?" asked Lady Gwendolen, breathlessly. The two men were wiping their perspiring foreheads. "Did you get him?" Lady Gwendolen had to repeat her question, this time more insistently. "No! And all my fault," explained the explorer. "I only wounded him, when I should have killed him."

"What are you talking about? Gwen seems to know, but I can't get a word out of her," said Lady Dorothy. "Where is Mr. Flint?" she was quivering with excitement. "Gone!" replied the Inspector laconically as he picked up the phone.

"But . . . but . . . I don't understand," stammered Lady Dorothy weakly.

"He killed Edward," explained Lady Gwendolen very quietly. "I told the Inspector. . . . Flint?" she gasped, as if she had not heard aright. "You told the Inspector! . . . How did you know?"

"I found his picture. . . . I knew when you called me to go to the garden. . . ."

"So that's what was the matter with you! Why didn't you tell me? I should have called our stable." Lady Dorothy, though slightly recovered from the shock, looked in a bewildered way from one to the other of her guests. "I can't believe it yet, Mr. Flint! Mr. Flint, of all people!"

Inspector Linscott put back the receiver. "That's all right," he explained cheerfully. "He'll have hard work eluding my men. . . . I'm not so sure." The explorer smiled. "I think I could lose my self without so much difficulty. London is a big place!"

"You've let him get away?" Lady Gwendolen looked accusingly from one man to the other.

"He was too quick for us," replied the Inspector. "He leapt across the room and smashed through the window like a young athlete. Armstrong got him twice in the leg, but a trail of blood's all he's left behind. However, you mustn't let that disturb you. We'll have him safe in jail in another forty-eight hours."

"You two such big men, and you couldn't get him," said Lady Gwendolen scornfully. "He is a tough one, if you'll pardon my saying so," piped up the voice of Gaspard, who was standing in the doorway. "I never did see his like at all. He isn't human."

I was waiting for him just outside the window, but he jumped astraddle me and knocked me cold, if you'll pardon my saying so. I've only just come to. . . ."

"Say, I'm sorry, Gaspard," interrupted the Inspector contritely. "But, to tell the truth, I'd forgotten all about you."

The explorer put his hand soothingly on her shaking arm. "Come," he said kindly but firmly. "You must control yourself and go to bed. And so must you, Lady Dorothy," he added, turning to the older woman. "For your own peace, I advise you to sleep in the same room, and the Inspector and I will take turns sitting outside your door, so you can sleep comfortably."

"I'm not afraid!" Lady Gwendolen flung up her head scornfully. "If I'd been here I'd have killed him!"

"There, there, you're not yourself, my dear girl," said the explorer gently. "You and our hostesses go up. There will be no further disturbance tonight."

As soon as the women had disappeared the Inspector turned to Armstrong. "I'll get a bit of sleep and then I'm off to London. The fun'll be all up there!"

"I'd like to come, too," was the wistful reply. "But my place is here, with the women."

"Right!" I understand," the Inspector answered cheerily. "Give the poet chap my greeting and tell him he'll soon be allowed to leave his present habitation. I'll let you know when we get our man. Goodbye for the time being, and many thanks for your help, old man!" He took Armstrong's hand and they shook heartily.

Left alone, Bruce Armstrong went up the stairs and laid himself before the women's door. The dishevelled butler had long before taken himself off to his own part of the house. Not because he really anticipated any further danger, but just to be on the safe side, Armstrong resolved not to leave the women that night. Bruin Peters, alias Donald Flint, was a desperate man. He was a man at bay, a savage with only a veneer of civilization, who would stop at nothing. So, Bruce Armstrong lay outside the door of the room which held the two women, but he did not sleep.

Inspector Linscott, on the contrary, was asleep as soon as he hit his bed. He would need his nerve and strength on the morrow, he well knew, and he did not intend to waste the five precious hours of sleep before him with any vain regrets.

All the following day Inspector Linscott and two faithful aids combed the higher surgical profession for the man to whom Donald Flint had gone for assistance with his wounds. The Inspector felt confident that he would seek expert advice without a moment's loss of time, as his ultimate prospect of escape depended so much on getting into condition as soon as possible. Lame, he would be spotted at once, he would know that.

Late that evening found the Inspector unsuccessful and discouraged. He was on the point of giving up the quest until the following day, when he noted on his list a surgeon of particular eminence whom he had deliberately put among the unlikely possibilities. Would Flint dare to go to him? To the great surgeon, Sir Phineas Booker? Such audacity seemed inconceivable. Yet Flint was an audacious man. Well, it would be his last try that night, and he would soon know.

He found the surgeon in, and was admitted at once on explaining who he was and the nature of his errand.

"Sit down and rest," suggested Sir Phineas, looking speculatively at the Inspector. "I suspect I'm the man you're looking for. Have a cigar?"

"Thanks." He lighted it and began to puff slowly. "So you have attended a handsome, dark-complexioned man of about forty for accidental wounds?"

"Twice today. Once early this morning and again just half an hour ago."

"I trust that it's more than a coincidence," said the Inspector, feeling his spirits rise. "What's your patient's name and where does he live?"

"If I didn't think he was the man you're seeking I shouldn't tell you." Sir Phineas smiled. "His name is Morris Bentley and he lives in a flat on Adelphi Terrace."

"Why do you think he's my man?" interrupted Linscott. "It's a different name and address."

"He answers your description, for one thing . . . and another, if he'd been wounded down in Devon, as he claims, by the way, he's very vague about it. I happened to ask some leading questions, being a man from those parts myself—he'd likely have been treated locally. At least, first aid, you know. But he'd seen no medical man until he saw me."

"Um. . . . Can you managed to go around again tonight and take me with you?" asked Linscott.

"I'll ring him up and see. I'll tell him I'm uneasy about his leg."

"Thanks."

After a short conversation he turned again to the waiting man. "His valet answered. Says he is still awake and will be glad to see me."

"Splendid! I'll call my two men I have outside and we'll go together."

CLIFTON

Rev. Dwight McCine of Bellefontaine, O., occupied the United Presbyterian pulpit last Sabbath.

Mr. Albert Reedy and family moved last Tuesday to Cedarville. He has been running the Mill Race Garage for a year.

There will be a supper and play for the benefit of the Clifton Daily Bible School on next Friday evening, November 14. The supper will be held in the K. of P. Hall at 6 o'clock. The program consisting of an address by Mr. Cecil Rice, late of Egypt, a playlet and music by a quartette and schools will be given in the Opera House. Everyone is invited to come.

Mrs. Mary Tobias was a guest last Friday at a shower given for Mrs. Roger Graham (Lois Chaney of Cedarville), a recent bride at the home of Mrs. Wendell Graham on the Xenia Pike.

Messrs. Edwin Dean and Robert Corry will go to Dayton, Monday, as representatives of Clifton Presbyterian congregation at a meeting of Dayton Presbytery.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church will hold its thank offering meeting at the home of Mrs. James Swaby, with Mrs. Arthur Swaby, assistant hostess, on Wednesday, Nov. 19 at 2 p. m.

Miss Nan B. Williams, of Dayton, former president of Dayton Presbytery, will conduct the devotional services.

Rev. Ralph Fox will also speak.

JAMESTOWN

Mr. and Mrs. Harve Lackey celebrated their golden wedding anniversary with a family dinner at the home of their daughter, Mrs. James Patterson near Xenia. Owing to the ill health of Mrs. Lackey, no elaborate affair was arranged. They received many beautiful presents.

The Pythian Sisters' convention of district No. 2 was held Tuesday at the Pythian Castle on West High St., in Springfield. Those attending from the local lodge were Mrs. Thurman Tidd, Mrs. Cleo Goodbar, Mrs. A. J. Christopher, Mrs. Belle Walker, Mrs. Harry Lieurance, Mrs. Mary Moon, Mrs. Della Burr, Mrs. Foster Jenks, and Miss Sarah Skyles the local representative.

The George Slagle Chapter of the D. A. R. held their regular meeting Saturday afternoon at the home of Miss Margaret Gilcrest. Mrs. Ernest Thuma and Mrs. Willis McDorman gave musical numbers assisted by Miss Harriet Reeder, Mrs. Lydia Keck Wiggins of Springfield gave "The Madonna of the Trail," and other poems. The hostess assisted by Mrs. R. G. George served dainty refreshments.

Mrs. Karl Robinson was hostess to twenty guests Thursday evening to a buffet supper at her home on N. Limestone St. The remainder of the evening was spent in playing bridge.

Mrs. A. Y. Whitehead, Mrs. Gene Cameron, Miss Clara Beale, Mrs. Homer Smith, with Mrs. Frank Marshall and Mrs. Jessie Reese of Jeffersonville, were house guests last week with Mr. and Mrs. John Perry of Marion.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Fenker were host and hostess Friday evening to members of the F. B. Class of the Friends Church. A delicious covered dish supper was served by the hostess after which the regular business session was held.

Mrs. Elizabeth Parker entertained to a six o'clock dinner Friday, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Bargdill of Springfield, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Latham, Miss Letha Hendrickson, Mrs. Emma Redding and Mrs. Martha Tresslar.

Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Jenks had as their dinner guests Saturday, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Woods, Mrs. Nettie Harding, of Washington, D. C., and Joseph Glass.</

"You two such big men, and you couldn't get him," said Lady Gwendolen scornfully.

"He is a tough one, if you'll pardon my saying so," piped up the voice of Gaspard, who was standing in the doorway. "I never did see his like at all. He isn't human."

of civilization, who would stop at nothing. So, Bruce Armstrong lay outside the door of the room which held the two women, but he did not sleep.

Inspector Linscott, on the contrary, was asleep as soon as he hit his bed. He would need his nerve and strength on the morrow, he well knew, and he did not intend to waste the five precious hours of sleep before him with any vain regrets.

All the following day Inspector Linscott and two faithful aids combed the higher surgical profession for the man to whom Donald Flint had gone for assistance with his wounds. The Inspector felt confident that he would seek expert advice without a moment's loss of time as his ultimate prospect of escape depended so much on getting into condition as soon as possible. Lame, he would be spotted at once, he would know that.

Late that evening found the Inspector unsuccessful and discouraged. He was on the point of giving up the quest until the following day, when he noted on his list a surgeon of particular eminence whom he had deliberately put among the unlikely possibilities. Would Flint dare to go to him? To the great surgeon, Sir Phineas Booker? Such audacity seemed inconceivable. Yet Flint was an audacious man. Well, it would be his last try that night, and he would soon know.

He found the surgeon in, and was admitted at once on explaining who he was and the nature of his errand.

"Sit down and rest," suggested Sir Phineas, looking speculatively at the Inspector. "I suspect I'm the man you're looking for. Have a cigar?"

"Thanks." He lighted it and began to puff slowly. "So you have attended a handsome, dark-complexioned man of about forty for accidental wounds?"

"Twice today. Once early this morning and again just half an hour ago."

"I trust that it's more than a coincidence," said the Inspector, feeling his spirits rise. "What's your patient's name and where does he live?"

"If I didn't think he was the man you're seeking I shouldn't tell you," Sir Phineas smiled. "His name is Morris Bentley and he lives in a flat on Adelphi Terrace. . . ."

"Why do you think he's my man?" interrupted Linscott. "It's a different name and address."

"He answers your description, for one thing. . . . and another, if he'd been wounded down in Devon, as he claims, by the way, he's very vague about it. I happened to ask some leading questions, being a man from those parts myself—he'd likely have been treated locally. At least, first aid, you know. But he'd seen no medical man until he saw me."

"Um. . . . Can you managed to go around again tonight and take me with you?" asked Linscott. "I'll tell him I'm uneasy about his leg."

"Thanks." After a short conversation he turned again to the waiting man. "His valet answered. Says he is still awake and will be glad to see me."

"Splendid! I'll call my two men I have outside and we'll go together."

CLIFTON

Rev. Dwight McCine of Bellefontaine, O., occupied the United Presbyterian pulpit last Sabbath.

Mr. Robert Reedy and family moved last Tuesday to Cedarville. He has been running the Mill Race Garage for a year.

There will be a supper and play for the benefit of the Clifton Daily Bible School on next Friday evening, November 15. The supper will be held in the K. of P. Hall at 6 o'clock. The program consisting of an address by Mr. Cecil Rice, late of Egypt, a playlet and music by a quartette and schools will be given in the Opera House. Everyone is invited to come.

Mrs. Mary Tobias was a guest last Friday at a shower given for Mrs. Roger Graham (Lois Chaney of Cedarville), a recent bride at the home of Mrs. Wendell Graham on the Xenia Pike.

Messrs. Edwin Dean and Robert Corry will go to Dayton, Monday, as representatives of Clifton Presbyterian congregation at a meeting of Dayton Presbytery.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church will hold its thank offering meeting at the home of Mrs. James Swaby, with Mrs. Arthur Swaby, assistant hostess, on Wednesday, Nov. 19 at 2 p. m.

Miss Nan B. Williams, of Dayton, former president of Dayton Presbytery, will conduct the devotional services.

Rev. Ralph Fox will also speak.

JAMESTOWN

Mr. and Mrs. Harve Lackey celebrated their golden wedding anniversary with a family dinner at the home of their daughter, Mrs. James Patterson near Xenia. Owing to the ill health of Mrs. Lackey, no elaborate affair was arranged. They received many beautiful presents.

The Pythian Sisters' convention of district No. 2 was held Tuesday at the Pythian Castle on West High St., in Springfield. Those attending from the local lodge were Mrs. Thurman Tidd, Mrs. Cleo Goodbar, Mrs. A. J. Fox is now hedging about who's to play the feminine lead in the musical that the Gershwins are going to Hollywood to compose. Janet Gaynor had been announced for the role, but other names, Jeanette McDonald's for one, are now mentioned.

The official pronouncement is, nett, who'll direct, is growing distant that no one has been chosen. In the meantime, George and Ira Gershwin and Ira Bolton, their good leading men in the business collaborator, have arrived to begin preparations for the production. Fox remains impervious to reports that musical talkies are dead.

The Gerswain picture will be called "Skyline" and will be New York medley. Guy Bolton, who will do the book, served in the same capacity for "The Love Parade."

Though unhampered by a morality clause in his contract, Mickey Mouse is forced by the censors to lead a model life.

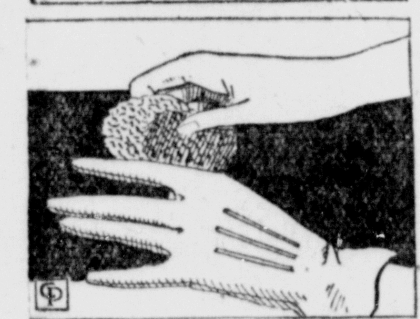

To avoid the scissors he does not drink whiskey, smoke cigarettes or cut suggestive capers. Neither must he do anything that might insult national dignity anywhere on the globe.

Ohio recently banned a Mickey Mouse cartoon because a cartoon cow was portrayed reading a copy of Elinor Glyn's "Three Weeks" which is about as intelligent piece of censoring as one would expect from a board that banned "The Big House."

A German censorship board ruled: "The wearing of German military helmets by any army of mice is offensive to national dignity." A Canadian board objected to the fact that a frolicking fish slapped a mermaid on the thigh with his fin, so perhaps all the stupidity isn't in Ohio.

Having influenced Gloria Swanson to choose the play, "Rockabye" for her next vehicle, Laura Hope Crews now plans to enact a role in the picture. Production is being held up until a suitable leading man can be found. Tay Gar-

Paramount is said to have wanted Victor McLaglen badly enough to pay Fox $70,000 for his services in one picture and to take over Lew Cody's contract as well. Lew had been signed to appear in a film with McLaglen and Fox insisted that Paramount take him over. They agreed, and as a result Lew is also to appear in "Dis-honored," which is Marlene Dietrich's second picture.

Robert Pollard, who has been residing in the Miami Powder Co. building on W. Main St., left for Los Angeles, Calif., where he expects to locate.

Mr. Pete Blair drove through to Pike County today for a hunting trip of a few days' duration.

Messrs. Lou Wooley and Ben Piers, who have been on the road this summer with the Ringling circus, doing a fancy aerial bar act, have arrived home for the winter.
